ROMY STORY

(1882 - 1907)

WHEN the University opened last September, there was noticeable among students and faculty an air of anxiety and foreboding. A stranger could have detected at once that something disquieting had happened or was impending. Groups of students might be observed asking, with troubled faces, whether any news had been received during the day. The final message came at last: "Romy is dead."

Romy Story was born in Aho, Watauga county, North Carolina, December 12, 1882, and died at his mountain home September 13, 1907. He was an only son, and his parents determined that their boy should not go through life fettered by ignorance and handicapped by lack of opportunity. But to educate him meant years of self-denial and deprivation. For him it meant a long and toilsome pathway, separation from home, and perhaps failure in the end. But there was no hesitancy or half-heartedness on either side. Romy showed at an early age the will power and the unswerving loyalty to an ideal that in later years did much to make him the man he was.

His early school days were not brilliant. It always took time for Romy to relate himself to new surroundings and new duties. But when he had once found himself in a new position, his progress was steady and uniform. There was never a backward step in anything that he undertook, and his development was not merely intellectual: it was moral and physical as well. In every school that he entered, his physical prowess made him a hero among his fellow-students; his industry, perseverance, and increasing efficiency won for him the growing esteem of his teachers; and his high sense of honor, his mingled gentleness and strength of character, made him loved and admired by all who came into close relationship with him.

After attending the public and private schools of the neighborhood, Romy entered Aaron Seminary in Mitchell county. In the fall of 1899 he entered Watauga Academy, now the Appalachian Training School. "During the four years spent here," writes the Superintendent, "no one ever made a suggestion to him as to his deportment. He was never absent from roll-call, and never shirked a single duty. He did good work as a student, and his influence was very helpful to the school. He organized the baseball team and soon became its captain. In the games with other communities he almost always won, and won fair. His teachers told him about the University, encouraged him to go, and helped him to plan. He was a great fellow, strong alike in body, mind, and character."

He entered the University in September, 1903. A study of his academic record here shows slow but perceptible progress for the first two years. But in his junior year he forged rapidly ahead. He had found himself now, and studies that had hitherto baffled him, began to give way before the steady pressure of his methodical habits and unconquerable will.

In the athletic life of the University, on both gridiron and diamond, he soon stood without a rival. In his freshman year he was elected captain of his class baseball team; learning that there was opposition to him, he promptly resigned and took a subordinate position rather than imperil the harmony and efficiency of the team. In the meantime, he was familiarizing himself with every detail of football, and training himself by rigid discipline to play in any position. In his sophomore year he became a member of the Varsity football team. In his junior year his primacy in both football and baseball was no longer questioned, and the student body stood back of him to a man. If he had lived to return to the University last September, he would have been captain of both teams. He lived long enough, however, to establish the most brilliant athletic record ever attained at the University of North Carolina.

Success and applause were powerless to mar the beauty and dignity of Romy's character. In the class room, on the campus, or returning from some victorious contest, with his name blazoned in the head-lines of the daily newspapers, he was always the same modest, unassuming gentleman. No profane word ever passed his lips, no bad habit is linked with his name, and the slogan of "Victory at any price" found no place in his creed or in his practice.

He will not be forgotten. His name and fame will linger as a benediction upon our University life and as an inspiration in our athletic contests.

"That rivers flow into the sea
Is loss and waste, the foolish say,
Nor know that back they find their way,
Unseen, to where they went to be."

FOREWORD

IN the get-up of this book it is our purpose to leave the classroom and enter into that part of the University life which is more enjoyable, that part which makes an institution like ours truly great. We intend to picture to you our life, so that you will know the kind of atmosphere that surrounds us. But there are some things that a picture cannot tell, and we are frank to admit that this University life is far too grand,—far too magnificent—for us to do justice to it in this necessarily small volume. While we cannot tell all or unfold to you the whole, we will attempt to give to you as nearly as we can the University as it appears to us.

And if we fail to emphasize some parts as much as we do others, we beg those of the departments thus neglected not to be too hard on us in casting their blame, but to bear with us yet a little while and remember that we do not claim the art of perfection.

We hope that when you have read our little book, that you will know us better, know our life, and most truly we hope that you will like us and our life. If you do not we have failed in our attempt. As to our success we leave you, our reader, to judge.

EDITORS.

TO THE UNIVERSITY

Down from thy borders on the North,
From Cape Fear and the southern plain;
From midland and from mountain forth,
From storm-front on the eastern main;
From other states and other lands
Thy foster-sons, with glad desire,
Hasten to join their hearts and hands
Around one central altar-fire.

O, Alma Mater, grand and true!
Our petty selves are merged in thee,
As clouds melt in the arching blue—
As wavelets sink into the sea!
Mother and Guide! the praise is thine
If aught of worth these pages show:
Thy spirit is a lamp to shine
Athwart the path our feet must go.

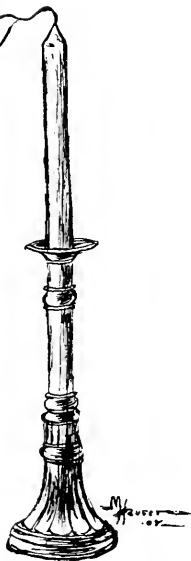

Take then the record; as, in truth,
Ourselves, long since, thou didst receive,—
The good, in joy; the ill, in ruth,—
Since all, for thee, we would retrieve.
If we have mirrored fair thy face;
If we have pictured true the spell
That binds us to thy heart of grace—
O, Alma Mater, it is well!

- September 9-11*—Birth of a litter of freshmen.
- September 12*—Fair Name and Fame of the University is upheld.
- September 12-30*—The freshmen are given an insight into the ways of the world.
- October 1*—Junior and Senior Classes adopt resolutions condemning hazing.
- October 2. (Morning)*—A headline appears in the News & Observer, "Hazing a Thing of the Past in the University."
- October 3 (Night)*—To show their appreciation of the above, twelve freshmen change their color.
- October 12*—A holiday,—characterized by a big circus parade.
- November 1*—Virginia's defeat on the gridiron is begun.
- November 28*—The game is played, and afterwards, "Friend Budweiser" becomes intimate.
- December 10-20*—A horrible nightmare.

1908

- January 4*—We wend our way hither to hear the welkin ring and to take up our life again among these classic shades. (NOTE.—Chapel Hill is one of the few places where you always "wend your way.")
- January 6-15*—A period of collegianized home-sickness, during which the University is always referred to as "this hole."
- February 22*—Amid dance and revelry, George Washington is born again.
- March*—The humdrum round of existence.
- April*—Easter comes and goes, but we stay on forever.
- May 18*—The final agony begins.
- May 20*—And ends.
- May 30—June 5*—One glorious week, and it is all over.

THE BEACON

In the western sky a star,
Low over the tossing sea,—
A maid with a light afar,
Waiting at the shore for me.

Crawling waves about my boat,
My soul athirst for the light.
Alone in the deep afloat,
Around me the circling night.

In the distant night a star,
A beacon across the sea,—
A maid with a light afar,
Waiting at the shore for me.

TO VEN

Here's Captain Frank, God save the king!
May his be unmixed joys,
His name and fame thru ages ring
At the hands of his dear boys!
His is an eye that has never slept
Watching the fame of his Alma Mater;
But from the watch that he has kept
You'd think she was his da'ter.

SPOSIN'

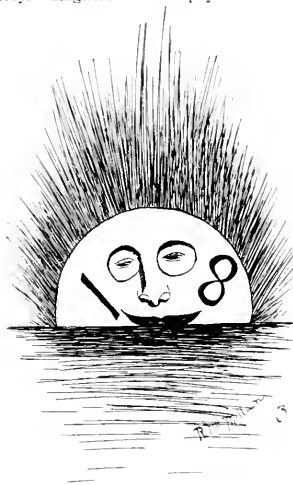

On her water wagon Mother Nature sits,
Sprinkling the earth below her;
While behind her wagon the thunder has fits—
And shakes the filled-up sprinkler.

And a head chock-full of gray matter;
I propose the question to a man with wits:
What would happen if she had Schlitz?—
Wouldn't there be a devilish splatter?

WATCHFUL WATT

I reside in Old South Building and my name is Watchful Watt;
And when the bell starts ringing I am Stacy on the spot,
And I'll tell in simple language all I know of what befell
On that bleak December midnight at the ringing of the bell.

But first I would remark that it is not an act polite
To be a-ringing of the bell in the middle of the night;
And if a student don't agree with my peculiar whim
I manage to be handy and expostulate with him.

Now nothing could be quieter or calmer than that night,
The buildings draped in shadows and not a Soph in sight;
Till the rooster's lusty crowing and the ghostly glimmering told
That the New Year was creeping in and driving off the Old.

All at once there came a rustling and chattering noise,
And I groaned and muttered to myself: "Here come those darling boys!
Well, I'll be here to welcome them, as etiquette demands—
Providing only that they leave the bell-rope in my hands!"

And then I smiled a cheerful smile, which didn't last me long;
Amazement wiped it quite away at that approaching throng.
The boys were represented but the girls were holding sway,
And towards the bell they headed straight and these kind words did say:—

"O, Mr. Stacy, won't you please just let us ring the bell?
We wish to ring the New Year in and toll the Old Year's knell.
We really hate to trouble you and we will thank you so.
If you will only favor us and let that bell-rope go!"

Now I hold it is not proper for a diplomatic gent
To refuse a lady favors—leastways not a regiment!
So I judged it wise to abdicate and let the ladies play
With that fascinating bell-rope in their own delightful way.

Cling! Clang! Cling! Clang! the sudden peals the midnight echoes woke, Till from that furious swinging the sturdy bell-rope broke!
The girls—they smiled a joyous smile and to the belfry's height
Flocked with this firm intention: "Curfew Shall Ring To-night!"

For in less time than I write it, every girl was on the stair,
A-scattering the curious that were congregated there;
And the way the bell responded was a sight—as well as sound!—
For they welcomed the New Year in a style to rouse the town.

Now this is all I have to say—though I might say a lot;
For I live in Old South Building and my name is Watchful Watt.
But I've told in simple language all I think it best to tell
Of that midnight expedition and the ringing of the bell!

"Deeper than ever did plummet sound I'll drown my book."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 6½ in.; weight 128 lbs.; Gimghoul; Association Football team (2); Yackety Yack Editor (3); Vice-President New Hanover Club (3); Track team (2, 3, 4); Captain Track team (4); Athletic Association; Biological Journal Club; ΠΣ; ΖΨ; Governor's Club. Medicine.

"Bob."

Runs Doc's phonograph most of the time and the half mile the rest of the time. Get's his work off; doesn't know how himself—and doesn't care, either. Spent three years chasing his N. C. sweater half a mile.

BENJAMIN LEONIDAS BANKS, JR.

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

"Who makes ducks and drakes with shillings."

Age 26; height 5 ft. 6 in.; weight 135 lbs.; Philanthropic Society.

"Ben."

Manager Gray's eternal rival for managing the University. The best business man in our class. Ben does as much as any two men here, but will always stop to pass the time of day or tell a joke. He will be the richest man in our class if he doesn't spend all he makes—on his clothes.

WADE HAMPTON BRITT

NEWTON GROVE, N. C.

"From the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth."

Age 26; weight 156 lbs.; height 5 ft. 8 in.; Phi Society; Historical Society; Economics Club; Sec. & Treas. of Sampson Club; Class Football team (3, 4); All-Class team (3); Captain Class Football team (4).

"Hamp."

The next to the laughingest man in our number, even runs Fatty a close race. Plays star class football, runs with Pat Williams and Jim Porter, but doesn't know why. As a rule he likes reasons, but is not long on giving them.

RAYMOND HUNT CHATHAM

MOUNT AIRY, N. C.

"Let the attyre bee comely, but not costly."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 142 lbs.; German Club; Gorgon's Head; Editor Yackety Yack; Oak Ridge Club; Commencement Ball Manager (4); KΣ.

"Chat."

Chat is one of our "spotes," believes in good clothes, trips away from the Hill, and the best time with the least study possible. Saved his hard work until his Senior year—and wore his "morning after" face most of the time, but didn't need it.

EDGAR WHITSON SHEARER COBB
SEDALIA, N. C.

*"He who crowns.....
A youth of labor with an age of ease."*

Age 29; weight 192 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Historical Society; Economics Club; President Guilford County Club.

"Parson."

The oldest man in our class and seems to have spent the most of his life talking—and it hath profited him little and us less. Is somewhat of a lady killer. Will teach Pedagogy very gracefully, not to say efficiently, a la Billy, but misuses too many double-jointed words.

JULIAN BAXTER COGHILL
HENDERSON, N. C.

"He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 150 lbs.; Class Treasurer (1); Class Orator (2); Phi Society; Economics Club; Y. M. C. A.; Press Association; Class Football team (4).

"Cog." "J. B."

"For verily, verily I say unto you, great is he in the quantity of wind he putteth forth, and exceeding small in the quality thereof." An embryo inter-collegiate debater and seems content to stay one. Will be an electrician of the Koon Royster type.

OTIS O. COLE

"Never stands to doubt, Nothing's so hard but search will find it out."

Age 23; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 155 lbs.;
Governor's Club; ΦΚΣ.

"Otix."

Cole came into our midst the beginning of our last year, and took enough work to keep him too busy to see much of the fellows. We wish he had come sooner, or taken less work. Something of a star baseballist, but won't talk about it.

HUBERT BASCOMB CONNOR

MARS HILL, N. C.

*"Oft did the harvest to his sickle yield,
His furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke."*

Age 22; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 165 lbs.;
Di Society; Historical Society; Economics Club;
Chemical Journal Club; Buncombe County Club.
"Hub."

Believes College a place to study; came here to do it and has. Knows but few men in college, but it is not his fault. Spends his spare time in the Chemical Laboratory, masticates the weed, and says nothing.

WILLIAM CHAMBERS COUGHENOUR, JR.

SALISBURY, N. C.

"I let the world wagge, and take mine case."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 7 in.; weight 145 lbs.;
Di Society; Gingham; German Club; Marshal
(3); Assistant Manager Football team (3);
Manager Football team (4); ΠΚΑ.

"Coke."

One of those waggish fellows who tries to seem a lot funnier than he really is. He's funny enough just so. Made the ΦΒΚ, but says now the work was wasted. We agree with him. Spends most of his time behind Doc Klutz's counter reading "Munsey" and "Argosy." B'll Robinson's successor as the most indifferent man in college.

JOHN HOLLIDAY COWARD

AYDEN, N. C.

*"Perhaps my semblance might deceive the truth
That I to manhood am arriv'd so near."*

Age 20; height 5 ft. 6 in.; weight 125 lbs.;
Gymnasium team; Phi Society; Economics Club;
Historical Society; President Pitt County Club;
Athletic Association; Y. M. C. A.

"Jonny."

Little, yes, but you ought to see the stuff he's covered with. Spends half his time doing stunts in the Gym. and shows it. Can outbark any dog in Chapel Hill. Has been lost ever since Cannon departed this our college world, and runs now with J. H. Coward.

MISS JULIA MANGUM DAMERON

WARRENTON, N. C.

"Be lowly wise,

Think only what concerns thee and thy being."

Age 33; height 5 ft. 5 in.; weight 118 lbs.

Joined us our Senior year and acts as though she were scared of us all. Her love for her studies is surpassed only by her love for Miss Lewis.

WILLIAM BARKHAM DAVIS

WARRENTON, N. C.

"This wonder (as wonders last) lasted nine daies."

Age 21; weight 180 lbs.; height 6 ft. 1 in.;
Class Secretary (1); Warrenton High School Club; Vice-President (4); Phi Society; Geological Journal Club; Economics Club; Modern Literature Club; Duetscher Verein; Licentiate in Latin (3, 4); ΦBK.

"Buck." "Dean Davis."

If he could help being himself, he probably would. He ought to, anyhow. Makes more noise than anything else, but did make the PBK and bragged about it until Horace gave him a "5" on Psych. He is still recovering from the effects. Thinks he is a wit but nobody knows why. He does know Greek and Latin, though, and well at that.

THEOPHILUS RANDOLPH EAGLES, JR.

FOUNTAIN, N. C.

"Present mirth is present laughter, What's to come is still unsure."

Age 22; weight 170 lbs.; height 5 ft. 5 in.; Phi Society; Class Football team (2, 3, 4); All-Class Football team (2, 3); Manager Class Baseball team (2); Economics Club; University Council (3); President of Class (3); Treasurer Athletic Association (4); Debating Union (4); Dramatic Club (3, 4); Vice-President Dramatic Club (3); Editor-in-Chief of Yackety Yack (4); Law.

"Fatty."

The laughingest man in the whole world. Can laugh at less, laugh longer, and laugh louder, than any two men in college; even laughs at his own jokes. Somewhat of a politician, a bit of an orator after his own style; and Editor of the Y. Y. If he prints this you'll know he agrees with it.

FRED ELLIOTT

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

*"The man whose silent days,
In harmless joys are spent."*

Age 20; height 6 ft.; weight 145 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Mecklenburg Club.

Business.

"Fred."

Could be popular if he would, but won't. Thinks for himself, acts for himself, and lives with Lloyd Ross. Came here for what comes out of books, and won't carry much else away with him.

JAMES ALBERT FORE, JR.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

"He looketh as butter would not melt in his mouth."

Age 19; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 145 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Football team (3); Secretary Y. M. C. A.; Commencement Marshal (3); Golden Fleece; President Y. M. C. A. (4); Vice-President Mecklenburg Club; Class Treasurer (4); Manager Class Baseball team (4); Deutscher Verein.

"Albert."

A living refutation of the statement that the Y. M. C. A. makes "molly coddles." Albert is president, but all to the good, more because of it than in spite of it. He's not nearly so high pious as he looks, and can raise as much rough house as anybody, when "Big Rankin" isn't around.

GEORGE MANON FOUNTAIN

TARBORO, N. C.

"I have strange power of speech."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 135 lbs.; Phi Society; Class Baseball team (1, 2); Edgecombe Club; Tennis Association; All-Class Baseball team (2); Class Football team (3, 4); Captain (3); President Tennis Association (3); Captain All-Class Baseball team (3); Varsity Baseball team (3); Winner of Tennis tournament (2); Captain Second All-Class Football team (3); Manager Scrub Baseball team (4); Varsity Tennis team (4); Economics Club; Historical Society; Athletic Association; Class Tennis team; Editor Yackety Yack (4); Vice-President Athletic Association (4).

Law.
"Bill."

Gray's rival as to who would get the most statistics in the Y. Y. Talks like a buzz saw and says about as much. Plays Varsity Baseball and Tennis and Class Football, and all of them well, too. Has an exalted opinion of G. M. Fountain's opinion.

JAMES ALEXANDER GRAY, Jr.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

"Ye have too many strings to your bowe."

Age 18; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 140 lbs.; Di Society; Modern Literature Club; Vice-President Y. M. C. A. (4); Treasurer (3); Assistant Manager Varsity Football team (3); Manager Class team (2); Tar Heel Editor (3); Assistant Manager Magazine (3); Sec. Press Association (2, 3); Manager Varsity Track team (3); Manager Varsity Baseball team (4).

Banking.

"Jimmy." "Manager Gray."

Beginning his Sophomore year he's managed everything here, excepting Ven, and wants to try that. We'd bet on Manager in the long run. Money talks to him and he talks for it. The best collector in college. If he holds this pace in life, he'll run Banks close second for our richest man.

BAILEY TROY GROOME

GREENSBORO, N. C.

"What men daily do, not knowing what they do."

Age 23; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 150 lbs.; Di Society; Economics Club; Guilford Club; Scrub Football team (3); Class Baseball team (3); Class Football team (4); Y. M. C. A.

"Bailey."

We've had him only two years, to our sorrow. We don't know where he came from and we don't know where he is going, but he's got here and he'll get there. It seems to be a habit of his. He's supposed to room in the Polly Ann, but really lives at the print shop. Sets type, smokes his Oom Paul pipe, and lets the other fellow alone.

HERBERT BROWN GUNTER

SANFORD, N. C.

"He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 155 lbs.; Y. M. C. A.; Di Society; Class historian (2); Sec. Modern Literature Club (4); President Press Association (4); Assistant Editor-in-Chief Tar Heel (3); Manager University Press (2, 3); Secretary Dramatic Club (3); President Dramatic Club (4); Editor-in-Chief Tar Heel (4); Phi Beta Kappa; Golden Fleece; Class Football team (4); Class Prophet (4); Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon.

Journalism.

"Herb."

He's willing to be convinced, but you've got to know more about it than he does to do it. Thinks things out for himself, takes his time about it, too, and then there he is. Succeeded "Squincey" Mills as Editor of the Tar Heel, and Chief Butcher of College. We sympathize with Quincey, with Herbert, and most of all with ourselves. Hub will make a good newspaper man, but he will run scare headlines.

EDGAR COOLEY HARLLEE

GREENSBORO, N. C.

"Such a man whose borrowed light is called straight in."
"Ted."

The rottenest punster in college, worse even than Koon Royster and Ok Coffin. Careful and painstaking, but he will tell stale jokes, and expect you to laugh. Will make a good chemist.

JOHN LINDSAY HATHCOCK

ALBEMARLE, N. C.

"Still you keep o' the windy side."

Age 24; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 160 lbs.;
Di Society; Historical Society; Business Manager Magazine (4).

"Hath."

A hand-me-down from '07. We're glad we got him. Is making good as Business Manager of the Magazine, and at booting Horace. Runs the People's Bank on the side, and is long on Psychology.

FREDERICK BYRON HENDRICKS

"Love me little, love me long."

Age 25; height 6 ft. 3 in.; weight 160 lbs.;
B. S. Guilford College, '05; KΣ.

"Fred."

Came to us our Senior year from Guilford, and took all the Math. he could get. Stars on Calculus and Psych. Is long, lean, and lank; almost as much so as "Shorty" Huffman.
Hasn't much to say and says it.

JOHN WILLIAM HESTER

HESTER, N. C.

"All is not Gospel that thou dost speak."

Age 24; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 154 lbs.; Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Statistician (2); Assistant Librarian (3); Sophomore-Junior Debater (3); Commencement Debater (3); Economics Club; Chapel Teller; Class Orator (4); Class Banquet Speaker (4); Athletic Association; Secretary Athletic Association (4); Member Finance Committee Athletic Association (4); President Oak Ridge Club; Yackety Yack Editor (4); Golden Fleece; Debating Union.

Law.

"John."

One of the best eggs in our class, but doesn't know it himself. Stars on chewing tobacco and chewing the rag, whether it be debating or Walker's clothes. Is one of these dry sort-of fellows who looks funnier than he talks and fears neither God, man, nor devil.

THOMAS McENTYRE HINES

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.

"O wherefore should I kame my hair."

Age 21; height 6 ft.; weight 145 lbs.; Phi Society; Edgecombe Club; Manager Class Football team (4); Commencement Marshal (3); Vice-President Class (3); Editor Yackety Yack (3); Tennis Association; ΔKE.

"T."

He does not like to stay on the Hill any more than he has to, and leaves whenever he can. Is neither very good nor very bad; in fact, is very much like everybody else, but thinks a lot of '08.

LEWIS LYNDON HOBBS, Jr.

GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

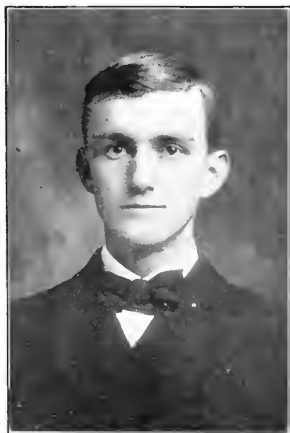

"Be wisely worldly, but not worldly wise."

Age 24; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 151 lbs.;
A.B., Guilford College '07; Y. M. C. A.; Guilford County Club.

Medicine.

"Lonie."

Another Guilfordite. Runs with Jim Davis, but we don't hold that up against him. His baseball record speaks for itself. We wish we had had him longer.

FREDERICK LAFAYETTE HUFFMAN

MORGANTON, N. C.

"While secret laughter tittered around the place."

Age 23; height 6 ft. 3 in.; weight 166 lbs.;
Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Economics Society;
Treasurer Wake Forest Club (2); Secretary and Treasurer Tennis Association (3); President
Tennis Association (4).

"Shorty."

Talks tennis, dreams tennis, looks tennis, and can't play it. As President of the Tennis Association was the man for the place. Shorty has starred on English 2 and 3, Philosophy 1 and German 1,—a good record for him. We sympathize with him,—he can't help himself.

JOHN QUINCEY JACKSON

WILSON, N. C.

"The childhood shows the man as morning shows the day."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 136 lbs.; Phi Society; Assistant in Chemistry; Oak Ridge Club; Chemical Journal Club.

Chemistry.

"Pap."

Our pretty man and lives up to his looks. Is very fond of J. Q. Jackson, but worships Doc Herty and B. Wheeler. Pays for a room at the Carr Building but lives at the Chemical Laboratory, despite the fact that he is a perfect lady.

ISHAM KING

SANFORD, N. C.

"Famed in the prodigality of nature."

Age 24; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 170 lbs.; Di Society.

Medicine.

"Faats."

A Christmas present from '06, and though he will not graduate with us, he is a true '08 man now. It is said that he used to run his class politics. Bangs a guitar to the queen's taste and is quite a singer, though he is too modest to admit it.

SIMON RAE LOGAN

STEVENSVILLE, MONT.

"If 'ho to himselfe is late no late doth neede."

Age 22; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 145 lbs.; Di Society; Modern Literature Club; Deutscher Verein; Le Cercle de Conversation Francaise; Dramatic Club; Editor Magazine (3); Editor Yackety Yack (3); Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon.

Ranching.

"Rae."

Came all the way from Montana to join us and we appreciate the honor. He knows what he knows but uses too many big words when he talks about it. Rae is a bit too partisan in his opinions but "there is nothing personal in this, of course."

SAMUEL HARLEY LYLE, JR.

FRANKLIN, N. C.

"Yes, I write verses now and then."

Age 19; height 5 ft. 7 in.; weight 128 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Varsity Track team (3, 4); Magazine Poetry Prize (3); Assistant Editor-in-Chief Magazine (4); Historical Society; Athletic Association; Victor; Le Cercle de Conversation Francaise; Press Association; Modern Literature Club; Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon.

Journalism.

"Harley."

Here have we a poet, stand ye by and listen. Can write more poetry and better poetry than any man here, but if he didn't write so much, more of it would be better. If he holds his pace, Lyle will be the best known man in '08. Can raise a rough house when he wants to.

JAMES HOWARD McLEAN

ROWLAND, N. C.

"There is no fire without some smoke."

Age 26; height 6 ft. 1 in.; weight 175 lbs.;
Di Society; Assistant in Physics Department (3); Instructor in Physics Department (4).

"Big Mac."

One of our adopted sons, came from Davidson, and shows it. Never smiles, attends to his own business and runs the Physic Lab. Can be found at Dr. Eubank's Drug Store when wanted, and smokes "threefers" galore.

HOWARD HOFFMAN McKEOWN

STANLEY, N. C.

"Home keeping youths have ever homely wits."

Age 29; height 6 ft.; weight 152 lbs.; Historical Society; Geological Journal Club; Treasurer Gaston County Club.

Came here from Davidson to study and has done it ever since at the cost of acquaintances. Knows a few men in college, but only because he has to. Mac is a friend of Maj. Cain, at least acts like it on Calculus.

JOSEPH SPENCER MANN

FAIRFIELD, N. C.

"None by two-headed Janus, Nature hath framed strange fellows in her time."

Age 22; height 5 ft. 7 in.; weight 135 lbs.;
Scrub Football team (1, 2); Varsity Football team (3, 4); Captain Varsity Football team (4); Class Baseball team (2, 3); Yackety Yack Edjtor (3); KA.

"Hoide."

Plays Football, wears a sweater, and loafs. Is specializing in engineering, and spends his time cussing "Billy" and "Archie." Runs with himself, which is satisfactory to all concerned.

LUTHER PRESTON MATTHEWS

SILOAM, N. C.

*"Get mency—still get mency,
No matter by what means."*

Age 25; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 175 lbs.;
Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Baseball team
(1, 2, 4); Scrub Baseball team (3); Captain
Class Baseball team (4); Class Football team
(4); Winner Di Declaimer's Medal (2); Georgia-
Carolina Debate (3); Business Manager Yackety
Yack (4); Historical Society; Economics Society.

Law.

"Matt."

The worthy successor of John A. He means business but not nearly so much so as he looks it.
Rooms with Stacy; talks Y. Y. and does intercollegiate debating on the side. Shaves twice a day and needs another.

WALTER McDOWELL MOORE

GRANITE FALLS, N. C.

"And having nothing yet hath all."

Age 22; height 6 ft.; weight 170 lbs.; Di Society; Class Football team (3); Scrub Football team (4).

"Walt."

It is reported that he was once caught studying, but we can't believe it. Can do everything better than everybody else—or else, says he can. We have our doubts. Bullish on Psych., German, and Math. 4. Whoops it up for '08.

BASIL GANTT MUSE

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.

"Speak low, if you speak love."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 160 lbs.; Phi Society; German Club; Class Football team (3, 4); Secretary and Treasurer of Edgcombe Club; Vice-President Senior Class; Manager Yackety Yack (4); Sub-Ball Manager; Commencement (4); Chemical Journal Club; Economics Club; KA.

"Took."

Side partner of Matthews, poor fellows, though he looks it even less. Lives in fear that he may have to preside at a class meeting, and so do we. Believes in girls, one and all. Played class football three years, but was too lazy to try higher. Slow, slow slow, but sure and steady, that's Basil.

DAVID ZERO NEWTON

LINCOLN, N. C.

*"Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid,
Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire."*

Age 24; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Di Society; Historical Society; Modern Literature Club; Economics Club; Class Representative (1); Y. M. C. A. (1).

"Zero."

A would-be poet. Tries to laugh but a cackle is his best. Is guaranteed harmless on any and every occasion. Thinks more of Jim Porter than is fair to the rest of us. Says what he thinks and does it.

JAMES MELROSE PORTER

GREENSBORO, N. C.

"I am not worth this coil that's made for me."

Age 23; height 6 ft.; weight 140 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; ΦBK; Chief Marshal, Commencement (3); Licentiate in Math. (3); Historical Society; Private Secretary to President (1, 4).

Teaching.

"Jim."

Ven's right hand man, and a good one, too. Quiet, never says much, but says something worth while when he does. Our Cuban friends all swear by Porter, as do Cephas Woollen and Zero Newton.

OSCAR RIPLEY RAND

"Who lives his life by rule."

SMITHFIELD, N. C.

Age 21; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 140 lbs.; Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Secretary (2); Class Historian (3); Magazine Editor (3); Class Baseball team (2, 3); All-Class Baseball team (2); Captain Class Baseball team (3); Class Football team (3, 4); Soph.-Junior Debater (2); Commencement Debater (3); Bingham Medal (3); Secretary ΦBK (4); Golden Fleece; President Senior Class (4); President University Council (4); Assistant in Latin (4); Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon.

"Oscar."

Rand is one of the best we have, as is shown by his office, but he will think too much about himself—not conceited, but self-centered. Plays good class ball of all kinds and will do us credit at Oxford. Prim, a bit old-maidish, and he just will answer "Present" on class.

ELDRED OSCAR RANDOLPH

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

"The unknown are better than the ill-known."

Age 26; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 148 lbs.; Di Society; Geological Journal Club.

He may know a dozen men in college but he does know his books. If life were a book he'd know it well, but as it is, he needs to get out of his room more. One of Collier's pets, and proud of it.

WILLIAM MERCER OATES

"My mouth runs itself."

Age 21; height 6 ft. 1 in.; weight 150 lbs.; Phi Society; Class Baseball team (1, 2, 3); Tennis Association (2, 3); German Club.

Chemistry.

"Mercer."

Mercer will make a lot of noise, but as his hearing is poor he doesn't know it. Has a room at Pick's, but really lives at the Chemical Laboratory. Mercer was lost until he tried Chemistry, but is making good there.

MANLIUS ORR

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

*"Still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast."*

Age 20; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 140 lbs.; Di Society; German Club; Mecklenburg Club; Modern Literature Club; Press Association; Editor Tar Heel (2, 3); Editor Y. Y. (4); Treasurer German Club (3); Tennis Association; Varsity Tennis team (1, 2, 3, 4); Glee Club (1, 2, 3, 4); University Quartette (2, 3, 4); Green Lemon Quartette (2); Winner Sketch prize (2); Scorer Varsity Football team (1, 2); Class Baseball team (1); Scrub Baseball team (2, 3); Manager Class Football team (3); Manager All-Class Football team (3); Assistant Manager Varsity Baseball team (3); Governor's Club; Chief Ball Manager, Commencement, 1908; Pi Sigma; Gorgon's Head; ΔKE.

Chemistry.

"Monk."

The slickest talker in our class. Singing, tennis, good clothes—that's Mr. Orr. Is our fashion plate, and a social leader here and elsewhere—so he says. As Chief Ball Manager will do himself some credit and us more. A Chemistry fiend.

DRURY McNEILL PHILLIPS

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

"If it please you, so; if not, why, so."

Age 21; height 6 ft. 1 in.; weight 174 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Magazine Board (3, 4); Dramatic Club; Yackety Yack Board (4); Modern Literature Club; Winner Short Story Cash Prize (2, 3); Geological Journal Club; Chemical Journal Club; Vice-President Press Association (4); Tennis Association; Class Football team (3); Track team (2, 3, 4); Manager Track team (4); Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon.

Mining Engineering.

"D." "Drury."

A wild and woolly cowboy from the Lone Star State—as is often shown by his dress. Came from the University of Texas—but it's an ill wind that blows nobody good. Won the lasting hatred of 'em by his zeal as our Soph. chief cheerer, and hasn't cared enough to try to loose it. The hardest butter here, and the most butted man in college, but it has helped. Has thirty-one hours this year and is proud of it. Will pass 'em all, too.

ORESTES PEARL RHYNE

GASTONIA, N. C.

"A very gentle beast and of good conscience."

Nobody knows much about him, but it is not our fault. He came from somewhere—at least we suppose so—but why, we know not. If he had joined us sooner, we would have known more and liked it better—maybe.

MARMADUKE ROBINS

ASHEBORO, N. C.

"—Therefore is reputed wise for saying nothing."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 7 in.; weight 118 lbs.; Di Society; Editor Tar Heel (4); Secretary Debating Union (3); Phi Beta Kappa; Golden Fleece; Economics Club; Press Association. "Duke."

One of our solid men. Rooms with Ben Banks, but doesn't show it. Came here on his brother's reputation, but has made one of his own. Says little, and looks wise; maybe that's why.

ZENO HARDY ROSE

"Young in limbs, in judgment old."

Age 29; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 185 lbs.; Y. M. C. A.; Secretary and Treasurer '03; Class Baseball '04; All-Class Football '04; (out of college 3 years); Sub-Varsity Football '07.

Another hand-me-down, and from '05 this time. Has a habit of smiling at you, at himself, and at the world. Marked by his sense of humor, and his steadiness. One of the foundation stones of anything.

LLOYD McCREIGHT ROSS

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

"Children learn to creep ere they can learn to go."

Age 19; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 130 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Mecklenburg County Club; Class Baseball team (3).

Civil Engineering.

"Lloyd."

Little and loud. Taking Math. and says he's going to be an Engineer. His admiration for Billy Cain is equalled only by his good looks. Lloyd is young, so give him time!

ERNEST COFIELD RUFFIN

WHITAKERS, N. C.

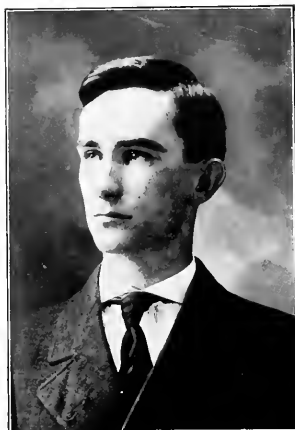

*"How happy is he born and taught,
That serveth not another's will."*

Age 22; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 150 lbs.; Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Baseball teams; Class Football team (2, 4); Vice-President Class (2); Historical Society.

Law.

"Ruff."

Sticks too close to his books. He doesn't need to, either. One of our best class athletes, but a bit too modest. When he gets "sot" in his ways, he's there come H—, or high water. Ruff has the courage of his convictions, and lives up to his ideals.

BEVERLY OSCAR SHANNON

GASTONIA, N. C.

"———My library was dukedom large enough."

Age 25; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 130 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Biological Journal Club; Assistant in Botany; ΦBK; Gaston County Club.

"Shan."

He gets too familiar with the Faculty at times. If you don't believe it, ask Dr. Alex. He knows. Shan is absent-minded, but when his mind does stay at home, it is a good one, as see ΦBK. He, too, belongs to the hand-me-downs, this time for '06.

THOMAS LEVINGWORTH SIMMONS

SHELBY, N. C.

"Here will be an odd abusing of God's patience and the King's English."

Age 24; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 158 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Football team (2); Scrub Football team (3); Class Football team (4); Assistant Manager Tar Heel (3); Business Manager Tar Heel (4); Commencement Debater (3); Economics Club; Historical Society; Athletic Association; Victor.

Law.

"Tom."

Mr. Thomas Levingworth Simmons, if you please, Business Manager of the Tar Heel and would-be man of the world. Used to swear by Stacy, but the last Y. Y. cured him, to Stacy's open joy. Tom is somewhat of a debater, but there are better.

SNOWDEN SINGLETARY

CLARKTON, N. C.

"Wise men say nothing in dangerous times."

Age 27; height 6 ft.; weight 175 lbs.; Captain Class Basketball team (1); Track team (1); Class Baseball team (2, 3); Scrub Football team (1, 2); Varsity (3); Commencement Marshal (3); Athletic Association; Y. M. C. A.; Phi.

Planter.

"Single."

"Get right." Single is a foot-ballist all over, but believes the game is to kill the other fellow, and as many of him as possible. He does it, too, but at the cost of three ribs and a broken neck. Single is one of our hard students but is no bookworm.

JEANNIE WHEWELL SPEAS

DONNABA, N. C.

"The love he bore to learning was at fault."

Age 19; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 142 lbs.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Athletic Association; Class Treasurer (3); Class Secretary (4); Deutsche Verein; President Φ BK; Holt Mathematical Medal; Modern Literature Club.

Teaching.

President of the Φ BK and Holt Medallist. He earned 'em both. Our prize bookworm. Seems to have inherited the mantle of Stacy and Hickerson on Math. Speas actually enjoys Calculus, but takes his books tog seriously.

WALTER PARKER STACY

BELWOOD, N. C.

"He has been to a feast of language and stolen the scraps."

Age 23; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 168 lbs.; D₂ Society; Class Football team (3); Class Secretary (3); Golden Fleece; George Washington-Carolina Debater (3, 4); Economics Club; Assistant in Physics (4).

Law.

"Stace." "Wat."

"Well, I'll tell you, fellows." Horace says he's a scrapper, and if you'll look at his face you'll believe it. President of the Gas Corporation but he usually says something; as witness his star debating. Stace is Head Nurse of the Infant Club and Chief Watch-Dog of the Bell Rope.

S. T. STANCILL

"Might have gone farther and fared worse."

"Stan."

Yet another hand-me-down. He got through at Xmas and started to teach till June. Has a "hail-fellow-well-met" manner and an inexhaustible supply of talk about anything or everything. He really doesn't know much about it, but that makes no difference to him.

EDWARD LATHAM STEWART

WASHINGTON, N. C.

"Lest men suspect your tale untrue, Keep probability in view."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 7 in.; weight 140 lbs.; Phi Society; Manager Class Baseball team (1, 3); Inter-Society Debater (1, 2); Commencement Banquet Speaker; Economics; Geological; Historical Society; Press Association; Tar Heel Editor; Glee Club; Correspondent News & Observer (3, 4); $\Phi\Delta\Theta$.

"Fay." "Stew."

Something of a gas artist, and succeeded John A. Parker as the official accomplice of Josephus, of the Disturber. Fay is a charter member of the Rough Housers and seems fond of "Po' Will Stem." Says he's going to study law, and ought to talk enough to make good—if noise counts.

FREDERICK ISLER SUTTON

KINSTON, N. C.

"And I have often heard defended, Little said is soonest mended."

Age 21; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 155 lbs.; Phi Society; German Club; Floor Manager Thanksgiving German; Yackety Yack (3); Scrub Baseball team (1, 2, 3); Sub-Varsity Football team (2); Varsity Football team (3, 4); Economics Society; Historical; Pi Sigma; $\Delta\Theta$.
"Sut."

Does not hurt himself studying, but seems to get along. Never says much, the main reason being that he never has much to say. Took too much work his last year to do anything but try to study. Fred is somewhat of a social bull.

WALTER WILLIAMS UMSTEAD

DURHAM, N. C.

"This bold, bad man."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 5 in.; weight 138 lbs.; Economics Club; Chemical Journal Club; Phi Society; Y. M. C. A.; Class Baseball team (3); Textile Engineering.

"Ump." "Walter."

He seemed to be lost till he tried Chemistry. Has been making good ever since he became one of the habitants of the Chemical Lab. and will probably continue. Ump will handle a cigar like it was hot at both ends, but he has to do something naughty.

BARNARD BEE VINSON

LITTLETON, N. C.

"And is of sense forlorn."

Age 18; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 143 lbs.; German Club; Yackety Yack Editor; Class Baseball team; Warrenton High School Club; KA.

"Barnyard."

Our nearest approach to a real character. The queerest mixture in '08. Has some sense but rarely shows it. Had his appendix removed, mainly because it was the fashion. Neither he nor anybody else knows what he will do when he leaves here, or what he has done while here.

GEORGE THADDEUS WHITLEY

SMITHFIELD, N. C.

"No man is the wiser for his learning."

Age 25; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Philanthropic Society; Y. M. C. A.; Licentiate in Mathematics (3, 4); Φ BK.

"Whit."

Another devotee to the printed page—managed to squeeze into the Φ BK as a result. He rarely opens his mouth, and when he does it is to talk pictures. He and Logan ran Holladay till he was tired, they were tired, and we were tired.

MARION MURPHY WILLIAMS

ROSE HILL, N. C.

"Promise is most given where the least is said."

Age 20; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 170 lbs.;
Phi Society; Class Football team (2); Sub-Varsity Football team (3); Varsity Football team (4).

"Murph."

One of the quietest men in our class, but it's because he doesn't want to talk, not because he can't. Played good football on the Class team till the Coach took him and then he rose higher.
Murph is rather bashful ordinarily, but forgets it when he plays ball.

PATRICK MURPHY WILLIAMS

WALLACE, N. C.

"How use doth breed a habit in a man."

Age 23; height 6 ft.; weight 168 lbs.; Di Society; Economics Society; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society; Class Football team (3); All-Class Football team (3); Senior Football team (4); President of the Guilford Club; Commencement Debater (3); Carolina-Pennsylvania Debater (4).

Law.

"Pat."

Pat takes so long between each word that you think something good is coming—and often you're disappointed. Fell in love with Horace and Bull Raper his Junior year, but is slowly recovering. Pat is a good debater, and a better man, but overdoes the deliberate.

WILLIAM COLEMAN WOODARD, JR.

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.

"A lion among ladies is a most disturbing thing."

Age 19; height 6 ft.; weight 160 lbs.; Phi Society; Edgecombe County Club; German Club; Chemical Journal Club; Assistant in Chemistry; Commencement Marshal (3); Commencement Ball Manager (4).

Chemistry.

"Will."

Another "spote": sells Walker's clothes, and wears 'em as an advertisement. Believes that money was made to spend, especially on candy, flowers, and drives. About the greatest ladies' man in our class, but a good man's man, too. Has college and class spirit to spare, but goes into things a bit too hard.

MARTIN LEROY WRIGHT

SUMMERFIELD, N. C.

*"I want that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not."*

Age 25; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 160 lbs.;
Di Society; Press Association; Modern Literature Club; Y. M. C. A.; Class Football team; Reader of Last Will and Testament; Guilford County Club.

"M. L."

Slow, steady, sure. One of the kind who works for what he gets, but it stays with him. Ordinarily rather staid, but sometimes has a playful streak.

WORTHAM WYATT

WADESBORO, N. C.

"Why am I?"

Biological Journal Club; Deutscher Verein; German Club; $\Phi\Delta\Theta$.

"Pete."

He is characterized by a characteristic lack of a characterizing characteristic, but he can chew tobacco and play set-back. Is a charter member of the Rough Housers. Believes Bony Hardison and R. T. Allen are the greatest men on the Hill.

WILLIAM ELMER YELVERTON

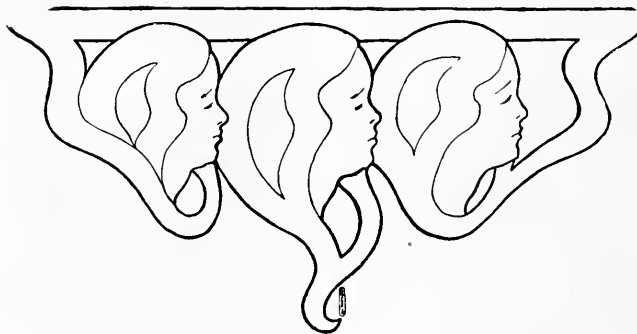

FREMONT, N. C.

*"My hasting days fly on with full career,
But my late spring no bud nor blossom show'th."*

Age 21; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 140 lbs.; Phi Society; Class Treasurer (2); Class Tennis team (3); Manager Class Tennis team (4); Class Baseball team (3); Commencement Marshal (3); Assistant Editor-in-Chief Magazine (3); Editor-in-Chief Magazine (4); Dramatic Club (3, 4); Modern Literature Club; Odd Number of Sigma Upsilon; ΦΒΚ.

"Bill."

There are seven men on the Magazine Board, but He is the Magazine. Thinks he knows poetry when he sees it, but has been able to get out a good magazine. Would like to be a ladies' man and even more to talk about it. Plays a good game of tennis.

History of the Class of 1908

IN September, 1904, the class of 1908 matriculated. One hundred and sixty-six strong we came, seeking new worlds to conquer in the Elysian fields of erudition. Acknowledged heroes and conquerors in our native land, we came confident of an easy victory. But, like the Macedonian monarch, we were destined to meet a stronger than we; yea, we were destined to bite the very dust with our teeth. In numbers we were legion, but as a class we were without form and void; and verily darkness was upon the face of many of our number. For several weeks we were often startled out of our dreams at night by divers bands of nomadic Sophomores, the worst set, their protests to the contrary notwithstanding, that ever walked the campus in darkness since the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Often we betook ourselves to Battle's Park and there by the murmuring brooks we sat down; yea, we wept when we remembered home, for they that carried us away captive required of us a song and they that hazed us required of us mirth, saying, "Lay off your clothes and sing us one of the songs of your native land." We hanged our clothes upon the willows in the midst thereof, but we could not sing the songs of our native land in the heathen's country. Our tongue clave to the roof of our mouth, our right hand forgot her cunning, and our countenance assumed the sable hue of polished ebony.

But the Spirit of the University, that indefinable thing that holds men together and helps them win victories, proved not recreant to her weakest children. In answer to her call and under the guidance of J. J. Parker the feeble sons of 1908 got them together and chose a leader, one Curtis, a veritable pedagogue, who absconded after four months, being succeeded by Vice-President Shull. During this year our work was of minor importance to the University but of tremendous significance to us. In academics we did not fail—that is, some of us did not—and in athletics we won the class football championship.

In September, 1905, we entered upon a new career. We were no longer strangers in a strange land. Courage and manliness were written upon our countenances, while the verdancy peculiar to Freshmen and often rivalling the green sward of the campus had entirely disappeared from our makeup. Fifty-one protozoans had fallen from our ranks, reducing our number to one hundred and fifteen. Again we must needs have a leader, and after sundry politicking and a Sunday caucus we chose "Peg" Reynolds as our chief for one year or for so much of that time as his personal dignity would permit him to be the humble servant of the class! Again the hope of conquering new worlds arose within our manly breasts. We minded high things but condescended also to men of low estate. We showed almost barbarious joy over the victory of Carolina at Norfolk, November 30, when the Orange and Blue was trampled in the dust to the tune of "17 to 0." We pledged ourselves as a class against hazing, but this fact did not deter certain of our number from admonishing in a friendly way the more froward of our younger brothers.

With the passing of our Sophomore year we came to a fuller realization of what it means to be University men. At the beginning of our Junior year only eighty answered to the roll call. Death, disability, and voluntary inservitude had thinned our ranks and left us a soberer set. As University men, it behooved us to grapple with philosophy and to enter into the mazes of science. Wherefore we chose as our chief one "Fatty" Eagles, who could laugh in the face of death, to lead us through these gloomy days. This year we furnished eleven men for the Phi Beta Kappa, although the standard of scholarship required was raised two and one-half points above that of preceding years. In class athletics we won the championship in Football, in Baseball, and in Tennis. Several of the best men on the Varsity athletic teams and two inter-collegiate debaters belonged to our class.

Verily the reign of Eagles was a goodly one, and as it drew nigh to a close we betook ourselves unto the mountains and the seashore and there for a season we forgot the petty bickerings of college life.

And when we came to ourselves again in September, 1907, only seventy-two met in the old chapel to choose a leader. Oscar Ripley Rand was elected chief. This year the initials of '08 have been written high in every phase of University life. But to say that we have developed in our number poets, orators, debaters, scholars, editors, athletes, and financiers, was no praise. We were expected to do that. Every Senior Class does that. But to the Class of 1908 must be accredited the special and happy work of bringing the divided factions of University life into a more harmonious unity. For several years factional lines have been too clearly drawn, and the social life of the University has been manifested too much by a few men. The Senior Class has endeavored to soften factional lines and to make the social functions of Commencement a thoroughly University affair. In these endeavors we have been seconded by the Junior Class and by the Fraternities, and the result is progress toward that unity of life, of interests, and of ideals, the consummation of which, let us hope, is near at hand.

As we think of Commencement we forget the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" that afflicted us during our early sojourn at the University. We forget that egotistic domineering attitude which characterized us when we were veritable bubbles, gushing nonentities, full of sound and fury signifying nothing. We forget the more serious problems that confronted us as Juniors. To us it is all but a pleasant dream. It seems but a yesterday since we came, and yet almost tomorrow we must depart. Behind us we can see along our pathway the graves of some of our brothers who have fallen on the journey upward. Before us—but to the common eye it is not given to look into the future. To the prophet we leave the pleasant task of drawing back the veil and looking into the future. We trust that his penetrating eye will see evidences of success unprecedented and enduring.

—T. W. A.

DEAR HEART, YOU KNOW

Why the world shines bright in the east's first light
And the blush of the morn's soft glow,
Why the whole day seems but a splendor of dreams,
Dear heart, you know.

Why the toil of the day is a joy and a play,
And I laugh as I face the foe,
Why the burden of life has with it no strife,
Dear heart, you know.

Why I sing a gay song, though the way be long,
And tarry not as I go,
Why life's dim years hold no shadowy fears,
Dear heart, you know.

LAWRENCE HARRIS CHEWNING

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

Age 21; height 5 ft. 8 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Class Baseball

"Chewing Gum."

*"His greatest ambition, we regret to state,
Is simply this, to graduate."*

We ordered him from a college of Pharmacy in South Carolina, but alas! we were faked, for truly we did not order an angel. He has an extra pair of eyes, but they do not aid him in seeing into things. We would not have you infer from his name that he uses gum, for indeed he does not. And being free from all habits he is not qualified to be a member of our class, but we decided to keep him just for a novelty and we have not regretted it, for his stay here has been very pleasant to us all.

WILTSHIRE GRIFFITH

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

Age 22; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Class Baseball team; Di Society; Band; Phi Kappa Psi.

"Griff," "Gram."

*"His drum and sticks are his only care
His music like the squeak of a teddy bear."*

Having decided last spring that we wanted a cowboy in our class we forthwith ordered one from the Lone Star State, but alas! we were faked again, for we got only a drum beater. Although he has been to Texas he is not a cowboy, but nevertheless he has managed to lasso the Bull courses thoroughly, especially Chemistry. He can pass a State Board Exam on two weeks notice. Not content with Pharmacy he took a special course in paints and varnishes. If Sousa could only hear him play his great big heart would swell with pride.

ROBERT ROSCOE HERRING

GARLAND, N. C.

Age 24; height 5 ft. 10 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; B. C. A. Club;
Class Historian.

"Bob."

*"When he has won a prize,
His ambition will he realize."*

Not a fish by any means, for he is afraid of water. Lank and lean are his characteristics. From the fact that he makes frequent trips to Oxford (Home, he calls it) we have concluded that railroad wrecks hold no terror for him. Doesn't talk much, but accomplishes a great deal. He has made a good record and we are proud of him. Another one that can pass a State Board Exam. on two weeks' notice. Probably he will be the author of a useful Laboratory manual some day.

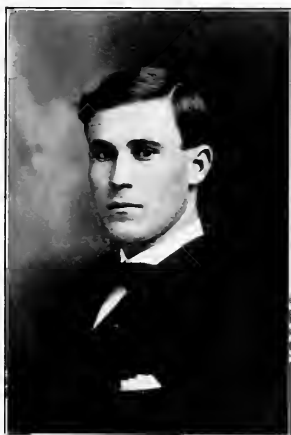

WILLIAM JACOB HICKS

Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Class Baseball team; Vice-President Journal Club; Class Statistician; Chemical Journal Club.

"Hicks."

"Least but not least heard."

Another small package but a large bundle of jokes. Let him tell you some of them and he is your friend forever. See that smile growing? He is preparing to tell you one now. A lady killer, too. Only one like him in the class; he constitutes the second novelty. Next to his jokes his greatest hobby was 5th Chemistry. A close companion of his pipe. Although he believes he will shine as a pill-roller, yet we cannot refrain from believing that he would shine brighter as an end man in a minstrel.

ROBERT MILTON McARTHUR

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Age 20; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 145 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; S. A. E.; German Club; Class Baseball team; Class President.
"Mac."

"Fast of speech, but slow of mind."

A small package, but not easily handled, and when it comes to talking, he's a regular chatter-box. Very proud of his strength and his wide knowledge of scientific subjects. When he knows a thing he knows it, and woe to him who disputes his word. He would have made a good class president but for the fact that he had to be constantly reminded that he held that office. Talks a great deal, but hasn't said anything yet. Wears good clothes, studies hard, and is an all-round good fellow.

CHARLES REMY PALMER

Age 21; height 5 ft. 9 in.; weight 140 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Class Baseball team; Class Prophet; German Club; ΣΧ.
"Remy."

*"Sir, I am a polished gentleman.
Do I deceive my looks?"*

He has the appearance of a gentleman, but that is as much as we can say, though we must admit that he is an all-round good fellow. Did you ever see him when he wasn't smiling? If you have then you have seen the eighth wonder of the world. We have never been able to find out how he employs his time. Possibly he studies. As he has never expressed his thoughts on any subject we sometimes doubt if he ever thinks at all. Object in life—Matrimony. Pharmacy with him is only a side-line.

HENRY LENNON POPE

LUMBERTON, N. C.

Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Phi Delta Theta; Class Baseball team.

"Cupid."

"That he tried and failed but once Does not signify that he's a dunce."

A handsome youth and he is well aware of that fact. He writes letters, reads books, goes to the postoffice, and at last but not least he studies. Match factories would surely cease to exist if they depend on him, for he has never been known to invest in that article. Spends most of his spare time in dressing and he positively will not remain long at any place where there is no mirror. A hard student he claims, and we had to take his word for it since he is considered to be a truthful fellow.

CHARLIE LEON ROSS

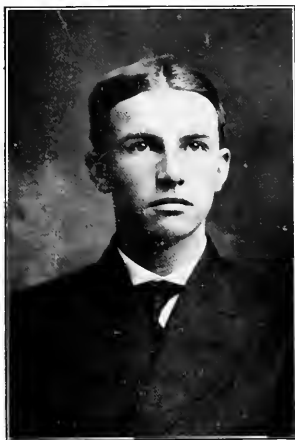

AYDEN, N. C.

Age 21; height 5 ft. 11 in.; weight 156 lbs.;
Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Vice-President;
Class Baseball team; Pitt Club; Y. M. C. A.; Secretary and Treasurer of Journal Club.

"Cholly."

*"That he takes things easy we must agree,
But just before exams he is studious as can be."*

A shock headed, shambling, awkward fellow with a comical expression of face, but a man every inch of him, and is proud of it, too. He works harder than any man in his class, to keep from working. We regret to say that he has missed his calling for it is impossible for him to assume that dignified air, characteristic of all good pill-rollers. Don't tell him a joke in the Laboratory unless you wish to disturb the other members present. It pains us very much to state that his favorite song is "No wedding bells for me." Therefore we have no idea as to what his ambitions are in this life. A jolly good fellow just the same.

CHARLES CHRISTIAN SHELL

LENOIR, N. C.

Age 18; height 6 ft. 1 in.; weight 145 lbs.; Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Di Society; Secretary and Treasurer of Class; Class Baseball team.

"Crick."

*"The saddest words of tongue or pen,
Are simply these, 'Blinded again.'"*

Another long, lank, and lean one; he hails from the tall timbers section. He has never been known to burn the midnight oil. Possibly he is opposed to the oil trust. A given believer in out-door exercise and doesn't allow his studies to interfere with this pleasure either. How he learned so much we have no idea. Possibly he has taken a course in memory training by mail or Stop Forgetting. His brain ceases to work when he opens a book. We suggest that he attend a military school to complete his education.

JAMES BENBOW WHITTINGTON

EAST BEND, N. C.

Age 22; height 6 ft. 2 in.; weight 165 lbs.; Secretary and Treasurer Class '07; Guilford College Club; Pharmaceutical Journal Club; Assistant in Pharmacy '08; Guilford College '06.
"Whit."

"Whistling, dancing, or singing a song, Happy and contented he jogs along."

He hails from the tall timbers. Being long, lank, and lean, he towers above them all. He is already high up in this life and we predict greater things for him—if he continues to grow. After leaving Guilford College he decided that his education was not complete and also that he ought to see something of the world. This is the only reason we can assign for his being here. His greatest hobby is catching rats and owls. Why, he may be the sole owner of a large animal show some day. Who knows? We believe he would be a good fellow if he were not forced to look down upon his classmates. His chief ambition is to run an animal show and be called "Professor."

Senior Law Class

FRANK LEMUEL DUNLAP

WADESBORO, N. C.

"A man much like his fellows."

Age 21; weight 135 lbs.; height 5 ft. 10 in.; Di Society; K. K. K.; Class Baseball team (1, 2, 3); Captain Class Baseball team (1); Judge Criminal Moot Court (4).

"Dun."

Dun enjoys laughing at the other fellows more than he does himself. He is rather quiet, not much talk about anything, for which we are truly thankful. If he would once get a move on himself, he could play good baseball, but it's too much work to suit his rather indolent spirit.

HENRY YEATMAN HEYER

WILMINGTON, N. C.

"Any man can grow hair on his face."

Age 23; weight 155 lbs.; height 5 ft. 9 in.; President Law Class; Manager Law Football team; K. K. K.; Di Society.

"Hy."

The originator of the hairy face fad so popular last fall. He began with a moustache, then grew a beard, then turned that into a Van Dyke—and then shaved. If he had kept on shaving it would have saved lots of trouble. Heyer stars on mass meeting speeches, especially in reference to the faculty, but stops with the spiel.

JOHN JOHNSTON PARKER

MONROE, N. C.

*"Affects the god
Assumes to nod
And seems to shake the spheres."*

A.B., 1907; Age 22; weight 160 lbs.; height 6 ft.; Di Society; Y. M. C. A.; Modern Literature Club; Economics Society; President Class (1, 4); Inter-Society Debater (1); Editor Tar Heel (2); Scrub Debater (2); Greek prize (2); W. J. Bryan (3); Georgia-Carolina Debater (3); Virginia-Carolina Debater (4); President Phi Beta Kappa (4); Mangum medal (4); Fellow in Greek Department (4); President Athletic Association (5); Judge Civil Moot Court (5).

"J. J."

J. J. has been pretty near everything he could be, and wants more. He seems to have the habit of having his own way, but does not know how to take a licking. J. can out-talk any man in college, and since Charley Weil left, is about the slickest politician we have. He will make a good politician, but a better lawyer.

A TROUSERED FLIRT

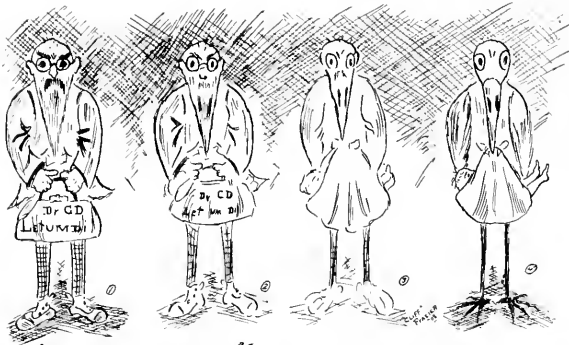

So you really believed those tales I told,
You thought my love was true,
You trusted me because I said
This whole world meant but you?

When first I kissed your willing lips,
And called you my only love,
You thought 'twas true because I swore
The oath by the stars above?

Why, sweetheart, you were but a child,
Seventeen summers or so,
And I was only amusing myself,
As summer flirtations go.

It's a shame you take it so hard, little one,—
Oh, not that I care one whit,—
But really you shouldn't have squealed, you know,
Especially when you were hit.

TO OUR LADY FRIENDS

A girl from the Normal, I swear,
Was heard one day to declare
 "Engagement rings
 Are just the things,
But 'tis better the more I wear."

A girl was in college at Raleigh,
B. C. W. was the scene of her folly,
 She was seen on the street
 A real man to greet,
When her notice should have been given to dolly.

A sentimental lady from Peace
Whose soul from this world sought release,
 Read Bertha M. Clay
 By night and by day,
Till a broken heart brought her surcease.

Some sorority members of Salem,
When asked if men ere did fail 'em,
 Replied with a smile
 Quite filled up with guile,
"Oh, no, it's so easy to mail 'em!"

A St. Mary's girl quite une chic fille
Has Huyler's whenever she will,
 Of beans there are many,
 But loves she? Not any!
"What's the use, they really like to pay my bills."

To Red Springs a tiny maid went—
Of course by her parents she was sent,
 Her dresses were quite short
 As indeed so they ought
And we're wondering what those parents ever meant.

A dear little girl from G. F.
Accustomed to care for herse'f
 Blondined her hair,
 Went to the State Fair;
'Twas a rank impression she lef.

JUNIOR CLASS

Junior History

The class of 1909 entered the University one hundred and eighty-nine strong, the largest Freshman class, with the exception of 1911, that has ever entered this institution. The class roll dropped to 121 in our Sophomore year and to 87 in this our Junior year. Of these at least 75 will return next year to face the music a la diplomé.

Besides furnishing a larger quota of writers, athletes, and scholars; besides heartily assisting the routine and workaday duties of college life, the class of 1909 has four possessions peculiarly and distinctively '09.

The first is the fact that R. M. Bryant—the redoubtable “Red Buck”—was a member and president of the class. There have been and will be none like him. He piloted, and piloted well, the large but then uncertain ship '09 between on one hand the Scylla greenness and on the other hand the Charybdis blackness.

The second is the fact that as Freshmen the class baseball team defeated every class team in college, winning the championship without a defeat.

The third proud possession of the class is the person of a man who performed the unthinkable, the well-nigh impossible feat of making a ONE on that mystery of mysteries—Psychology.

The fourth, last, not least, aye most precious and most distinctive possession of the class is its clean political record. It is the first class in which for over a decade there has not been held a political caucus.

By these four things the class of 1909 has stamped its personality distinctively and indelibly upon University life.

Sophomore History

AFTER an awful and never-to-be-forgotten trip from University Station we arrived here, safe, but in a terrible state of mind. We had heard of the atrocities generally perpetrated upon Freshmen, and the sample we received on the aforesaid trip did not relieve our fears in the least. The first few nights were spent either in Battle Park or the nearby churchyard, places of refuge from which could be heard the terrifying yells of the Sophomores, which made us shiver in our boots and wish we were "to home." But finally we became accustomed to such things and got to know each other sufficiently well to go out on the athletic field in the grey dawn, and under the protection of our champion, Mr. Hatch, to let Mr. J. J. Parker appoint for us an efficient president, who, though unknown to most of us at the time, afterwards proved himself well worthy of the great trust and honorable position conferred upon him. After this we waxed wise (?), as Freshmen will. The rest of our first year was finished almost uneventfully, and we left after our spring examinations with our one ambition and wild desire to come back and be Sophs.

And back we came the following fall a crowd of howling lunatics, feeling greatly within ourselves that thing which we mistook for importance. What we considered our duty was to murder the contemptible Freshmen, or at least to scare them to death. This, however, soon became monotonous, and dangerous, too, because of some duty-obeying Seniors who felt themselves called by their Alma Mater to prowl around the campus with lamps during the wee small hours of the night. So 1910 being a kind-hearted and philanthropic class, perceiving that some of '08's men were in danger of damaging their health through loss of sleep, decided to banish hazing for a year at least.

We are all proud of our class, and especially of our president, who is a typical 1910 man. In him we have perfect confidence and all of us appreciate how much his excellent leadership has had to do with the strides our class has made in college activities. We are unusually strong in athletics, having men on the Varsity football, baseball, and track teams. Our class athletics, also, have been among the best, and our debaters have proven themselves inferior to few. But that upon which we pride ourselves chiefly is the friendliness and good-fellowship which prevails among the members of our class. There have been no wrangling nor misunderstandings with us. There have been no factions, politically or otherwise. We have always stood together undivided and in peace. May we continue thus all our college days.

Freshman Beginnings

Deer mammy—

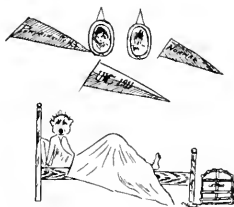

Im here, but I wish I wuz ter hom agin. Im homesick, an tired, an nobody here kares a bit bout me, an I dont lik Chapel Hill er bit! Ther wuz nobody ter meet me at ther train, an I had ter go ter college by my lonesom, an ther President wuznt ter his office, so I had ter go down ter his house, and he sed I ort ter have waited till ther nex day an tol me ter go ter Picks an git me er room an go ter bed, thet I wuz so fresh that he wuz erfraid ther night air wud hurt me. At thet place called Picks ther wuz a lot er boys, and they all laffed at me, an wanted ter know wher I wuz frum, an when I told em that my hum wuz Squashville Creek Cote house, they laffed sum more but I didnt see why. An then one uv em come up ter me an asked me if Id come ter go ter the University, an I sed yes, an he asked me if Id gotten my room in Battles Park or seed Judge Brockwell the Gargian sperit of Freshies. An I sed no, ther President hed jest tol me ter go ter Picks an stay in all nite, but thet I kudnt see why he made me wait. He asked me if Id reelly gon ter ther Presidents house, an I sed yes, an he reached fer my han an sed he wanted ter congratulate me on my "splendid spirit, an my redy to college traditions." He mad a nice little speech, an I liked it, an sed so, an he tol me how proud he wuz ter be ther first ter welcome ther "truest specimen of the genus Freshmanius verdantissimus then extant in the gathering place of all verdantness." Lor, he cud use words! I cudnt understand haf uf em, and sed so, but it wuz er great speech! All ther boys sed so. An he asked me if he "could not confer upon himself the great honor of escorting me to a choice apartment in the Battle Park Hostellerie, as the way was long and rather tedious to a stranger." He wuz so perlite thet I sed he cud if he wanted ter. An then erbout ten uf ther other boys sed they wanted ter go too, so I sed they cud, but he sed thet three wuz enuf, an we started. One uf em jest wud carry my telescope, sed it wuz an honor to carry the "personal impediments of so illustrious a specimen of Freshmanius verdantissimus." Whut duz them two las words mean? Ive been called them jest lots uf times. We went an awful long way, all in ther dark, an ther paths wuz too twisted an hed too meny roks fer me ter tell which way we wuz goin. An then all those boys wuz so kind, an kept me talkin so much, an they laffed at most everything I sed. I spee we went mos a mile, mebbe mor, mebbe less, it wuz so dark thet I kudnt tell wher we wuz goin an what way, er anything. After a while we all stopped at whut seemed er big house under sum trees, an then ther one in front, not ther one who asked me ter go, called out thet ther wuz nobody ter home, an thet they wud hev ter go in & git things redy fer me. Ther other two went in, but my friend stade with me. After erbout ten minits, when we didnt heer nothin frum ther boys gettin reedy for us, he sed he guessed hed better go see what wuz ther matter, an fer me ter wait till he come fer me. So I sed I wud an he slipped in ther door an I waited. He tuk an awful long time ter git things redy fer me, but he hed tol me ter wait fer him an I did, erbout an hour, but when he didn't kum then I got up an went ter ther door, an called, but nobody ansered, so I went in an ther house hed nothin in it but er candle an sum cans an trash, an all ther boys gone. They must hev gon ter ther rong place an when they found it out gon on ter ther other, ter git ther reedy. So I thot I mite as well wate, as I didnt know ther rode away, so I kleened out er place on ther floor an lade down, an went ter sleep. It wuz late when I woke up an it wuz way out in ther woods, so I tuk one uv ther paths an after erbout er mile come in site uf ther University buildings. I went up ter ther presidents office an in ther hall uv ther building saw my friend uv ther nite before. He saw me an grinned, sed a word ter ther crowd, an then asked me if I had "passed a pleasant night in my choice apartments at the Battle's Park Hostetrie." I sed no, I hed slept on ther floor an why didnt he kum fer me as he hed promised. He looked at me an gasped "Oh, Lord. He isn't on yet!" An then he grinned agin an sed ter ther crowd thet I wuz "richly deserving the proud title of Freshmanius max-issimus verdantissimus," an thet he took great pleasure in conferring the title upon me. An I sed "Thank you." But I dont know yet whut it means, but I guess Ill learn before Ive ben here long,

Yore son,

HEZZY.

CONCERNING A MOSQUITO

THE FIRST EFFORT OF A FRESHMAN

O! hark, O! hear, how loud and clear
A skeeter buzzes 'round my ear;
And louder, clearer, closer comin'—
O! how I dread that hateful hummin'!

Second Spasm

I was up one morn before sun-rise:
I smote a skeeter twixt the eyes;
And as his kins folk came around
I heard a doleful hummin' sound

Third Spasm

E'en as his family bore him off
I heard him give a mournful cough;
But three days later, as I say,
I saw his funeral pass my way.

Last Pain

My friends, they go o'er yon high hills
To get some grub and grind their bills,
And when they return, with regret I say,
They'll make us feel right far from gay.

History of the Second Year Medical Class

THE student who assumes the role of historian to a class that is about to enter upon its final examinations in a college where its members have spent four or five years, experiences a feeling of melancholy,—but also one of joy. To be associated with a class of boys for a period sufficiently long to know their faults, as well as become thoroughly familiar with their admirable traits, brings to each member of said class a sensation of loneliness when the time comes to separate. For be it remembered that we have been co-workers in science delving into the causes and effects of all ills which affect the human family, in the sincere hope that we may alleviate its sufferings. The Yellow Peril, international peace, war, graft, local option, etc., do not extend to us the same fascination which we heretofore felt in following the courses of their destinies. Nor are we affected by the strikes and panics which, at intervals, wield a powerful influence over the affairs of our nation. But when it comes to a point of the contagion of a certain disease, the cause of its spread, the cultural characteristics of the infecting organism, or of the advisability of exploring the abdominal cavity of a patient suffering from symptoms indicative of alimentary disturbances, then we are your staunchest allies, ready with all the skill which our preparation has developed.

And so it is easily seen that we are in a class more or less to ourselves, and that our separation is accompanied by a full realization of our seclusion. But our life's work is clear-cut before us, and it is our duty to attempt the accomplishment of the results which we undertake to obtain.

And so we shall scatter as chaff before the wind, yet the bonds of our friendship will not loosen, nor the memory of each other fade. And, undoubtedly the recollection of each one will bring to mind the trait most characteristic of his college life.

Who can forget the loyalty with which Griffin unswervingly insisted upon Parliamentary procedure at any meeting whatsoever, and the wonderful supply of speech he always had stored up for any and all occasions?

Who would ever think that any man could carry such a deceitful face as did Nichols? Deception personified, in that his countenance indicated a woman hater, when, in reality, he was in the depth of love from September till June—and with a different girl each month.

It will be some time before the face of our typical bald-headed, hot-tempered Irishman, "Baldie" Moore, ceases to be as vivid in our memory as it is to-day.

We cannot but laugh at the quandary in which MacMillan found himself (just before Xmas) when he uttered these words: "Boys, of my three girls which one do I love the best?"

And Klo—well, to judge by the walk with which nature endowed him, one would think he was Dean of the Medical Department. But, revelling in wisdom derived from worldly experience, he could tell more jokes than any man in the class, and was always ready to furnish the entertainment of an evening's smoker. All of us liked Klo.

And if you could have seen Benbow with his banjo, you could not but have believed that you were at an old-fashioned country "breakdown." Benbow and his instrument were almost inseparable companions, and a great deal of persuasion was required on the part of his roommate to prevent its going on lecture with its master.

And do we for a moment forget the girlish modesty of Lovill and Jim Davis? And why should they not be modest? For is not that a characteristic to be admired in a physician?

Freddie Whitaker, during each year of our course, came to the rescue in the matter of baseball, and prevented us from not having the distinction of not having a representative on the diamond. We should have had a star on the gridiron from our class, and most probably would have had, but "Marse Jesse" Strickland in a practice game one afternoon had his jersey torn, and his chest was unfortunately scratched by someone's finger nail. Poor fellow, he mistook the abrasion for a serious injury, absolutely refused to go on the field again and consequently condemned our class to the ignominious reputation of not having sent its quota to the "Varsity."

But then, to be serious, our class did have its full share of all-round good fellows, such for instance as the Sumner Brothers, Sprenkle, Hester, McCall, McPherson, Fiscus, Rowe, Shull, Liles, Rodriguez, our friend from across the pond, and above all, that prince of manly men, Eason, whose every feature bespoke manhood in its essence.

But our sense of gladness predominates when we bear in mind our record at this college—one to which we point with pride, conscious of the fact that it excels all others.

When we entered this college to begin the study of the science of medicine, we took up our work with all the earnestness which we could command, and our first "practical" demonstrated the fact that our labors had borne fruit, for in that examination not a man failed to make the required grade. When the year ended we still held our own as a record class.

At the beginning of the next year we were surprised and almost paralyzed with consternation at finding "Anatomy of the Brain," that most difficult of all courses, staring us in the face. It had been moved up one term, and was ready to meet us when we began the attack. Imagine, then, our unbounded pleasure, when, looking up the bulletins at the close of mid-term examinations, we found that the same good fortune which had guarded us at the first "practical" was still keeping vigil over us. Our line was still intact. It is natural, then, that to those dealing in futures, our stocks, so far as the coming examinations are concerned, are far above par.

But let me tell you of the pride of our class at this institution. Our class originated, advocated, established, and set in good working order the Medical Society of the University of North Carolina,—an organization allowing admission by scholarship only,—and intended to encourage work along original lines, together with a report on the same before the society. We shall never forget the help of our Dean, Dr. Manning, in this venture, and we are sure that if succeeding classes display the same enthusiasm that ours did, the society is destined to be an influence for good at the University.

Therefore, we are but justified in being proud of our class. But let us add that work was a pleasure when kind, thoughtful, congenial teachers, who had our interests at hand, assisted us in our efforts. Let it not be forgotten, that our experience has taught that such teachers are the greatest stimuli to high scholarship in any class. And when we leave our beloved University, we shall carry in our hearts the thought that we have the best faculty in the world.

The Punishment

A Tragedy in One Act

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

SHADE OF ALEXANDER THE GREAT

BO SHANNON

STUDENTS. PROFESSORS.

TIME: 20th Century.

SCENE: Hall of Alumni Building, outside Psychology Room.

ACT I.

First Student. Hello!

Second Student. Hello yourself, old sport! What's up?

First Student. Matter enough! Here's Muncher, Collier and Great Horace too, who at to-morrow's sun
Presage fell quizzes;—them I may not skip
Lest with wild lamentation I be cast
In outer darkness—sixes for my pains.

Third Student. (Yawning) O, Cæsar, what a weary world is here!
Quizzes, exams., and nothing else beside.

Second Student. Peace to your sighs! And you, my worthy friend,
Look up! The morrow has not dawned, and yet
We have some hours of leisure; let's away
To Eubank's soothing fount, and drown our cares
In Coca-Cola's soul-delighting stream.

First Student. Good work! We'll go. But stay, who is't comes With such unwonted speed?

Second Student. Bo Shannon!

Third Student. True.

Second Student. We will engage him ere he pass. (Enter Bo Shannon) What ho!

Bo Shan. What ho! Sweet friends, what means this parleying?
And whither are you bound?

First Student. Why, to the last—
To Goodman Eubanks' there to quaff a glass;
And to the former—we are, e'en as you,
In ignorance of what it may purport—
This gaping throng, with eyes in fixed stare
On yonder portal.

Bo Shan. Something strange, no doubt.
Advance we now and clear our anxious minds
Of this perplexment. (Goes to door of Psychology Room).

Second Student. Ay, 'tis passing strange!

Bo Shan. (Standing on tiptoe and looking in) Look, a motley crew,— Seniors absorbed;
Innocent Freshmen with wide, dewy eyes;
And doctors twain, with philosophic brows.

Third Student. Can you interpret this?

Bo Shan. The shifting throng
Obscures my vision. You, good gossip, there,
Whose ponderous bulk before me fills the view,
If thou'lt not turn, I prithee, let me lean
My chin—so—on thy shoulder, and combine
My observation with thy commentaries.
What! Silent still! Art dumb? Speak on, sweet coz.
Or I must jog thy tongue. (Playfully digs chin in shoulder)
What means it, pray?

Shade of Alex. (Turning; sepulchrally) That—I—may—not—tell.

Bo Shan. (Falling back). Ah, woe is me!
Wretch that I am! what have I done? and whom Have I affronted? Grace, great Alexander!
Look not, I pray, with those compelling eyes,
No Junior thou; thy front of regal calm
Bespeaks a soul accustomed long to rule,
And my rash spirit, hurtling on to wrack
Feels thy swift vengeance mount along my blood!
But it is just, and in one moment, so,
I die. Friends, comrades, all—farewell!
O Sir—your pardon—no, it is too late!

(Dies. Funeral march in distance. Sound, as of a Freshman, sobbing).

(Curtain).

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL.

My dearest Jane:—

I promised you a full account of my impressions and this is to be the fulfillment of my promise. The fathers who founded the University of North Carolina had certainly an abiding faith in the Tar Heel thirst for knowledge. No other State in the Union would stand for the probation of University Station. I stayed there for the better, or worse part of four hours, with no companionship but that of a German dictionary, left out of my trunk, and thrust into hasty and ignominious companionship with bottles and brushes and other feminine paraphernalia. Masculine realism, I'm sure, would insist upon a bottle of smelling salts, a pair of curling irons, a box of chocolates, and a novel by Laura Jean Libbey—the which might have alleviated my misery. But this is a plain fact narrative, and my poor little hand bag, fairly bursting with its store of information, could yield no further amusement. I learned every word beginning with A in that Dictionary. It was a voluminous one, but I don't seem to come across many "A" words in my German reading. Guess I don't observe very closely.

At any rate, I finally reached Chapel Hill, not very enthusiastic, and with my thirst of knowledge considerably slacked by the combination of University Station and that German Dictionary. There are several "Co-eds" here, of whom I am one—fancy! Such a name to give the dignified beings who figure so primly in the catalog as "Young Ladies pursuing courses of study at the University!"

That is rather a mouthful for everyday use. And one can't say "the girls" as we did at school, in the face of the manifest inability of that word to cope with the situation in its entirety. The English language is a poor thing at best. But the term "Co-ed" does not appeal to my esthetic sense. Still after a few weeks of Co-ed-dom, one's spirit is inured to any ignominy. In other words, one becomes as truly "womanly" as is consistent with being in that state at all. Still, I must confess there are some palliations to the lot of a co-ed. I have found a few. And if she possess a sense of humor her path fairly bristles with them.

My real experience as a co-ed began with the regulation interview with the "Powers that Be." A co-ed, it seems, is privileged to carry an escort even to the Sanctum Sanctorum, if she can find such a daring spirit. So I had one. It was raining hard, but all the way across the campus, were men standing umbrellaless, staring quite openly and cheerfully. It makes one feel of her back hair, you know, and I said, "John, what is the matter with me?" And he grinned madly, and said, "Matter enough, my dear, you're a new co-ed." I began to understand my position, which up to that time, I had taken seriously, though not solemnly. If I'd had an easily detachable hat, I should have passed it around for pennies, and felt that I'd earned them.

We finally reached the Presence, taking immediate precedence of a long line of masculine Hoi Polloi. (There's an alleviation with a sting in its tail!)

UNIVERSITY STATION AND THE GERMAN DICTIONARY!

Nods and becks and wreathed smiles are evidently the co-ed's portion. Secretly I admit that the ignoring of this smiling chivalry has been my greatest cross, but I suppose the system turns out excellent co-eds. I know a number that it's turned out! Anyway, the Grand Panjandrum beamed patiently, and advised me to "look my prettiest and go to see the professors, and I'd get all the credits I wanted." Fancy! I suppose he was joking, I told him if that was the approved method I'd better wait till it stopped raining, and he laughed and looked at my hair, and said he fancied the rain had terrors only for ladies who were addicted to the curling-tong habit; and I said, Oh, no, there were always overshoes, and he laughed again, and said the Professors were more concerned with the head than the feet. So I was a little ruffled and I said I suppose, like most men, more with the outside than the inside. And John looked as if it were time to go, and so we did, but the great one apparently didn't mind and I'm convinced that only intimate knowledge of the habits of school teachers and clergy enabled me to escape without a pat on the head.

Well, I finally drifted into some classes, and I've learned some things that aren't in the books. My dear, the modesty of these Professors is appalling! No "sweet girl graduate" could be more "timid and shrinking" and I've found the trait at times a great convenience. You know that a co-ed sits alone in her glory, in a sort of Amen corner (constructed, I fancy, particularly for this purpose) facing the audience, so that no matter how crowded the lecture room she always has these two benches to herself, and as many more as possible. This is not always an advantage. There are no sheltering arms to receive your shrinking ignorance when you see your name writ in the Instructor's eye, and as the ground won't swallow one up, one has recourse to other methods.

In most cases I observe that it's sufficient to take refuge in a modesty and shyness as invincible as the Professor's own.

And you can imagine the dead-lock that ensues when the teacher and the taught decline to meet each other's eyes, for of course the shock of deliberately pronouncing a feminine name in public, would be too tremendous a shock to her delicate sensibilities. So one is allowed, as a rule, to remain in the retirement befitting her sex and station. Of course one occasionally overcomes her shyness sufficiently to raise her eyes filled with a look of intelligence and understanding, with the result that she is courteously requested to impart the knowledge which inspired the look. Occasionally, of course, an accidental look of intelligence betrays one into an awkward situation; but there is still the refuge of maidenly confusion, downcast looks, and very low-toned fluency. One may be reciting Poe's "Raven," but Man-afraid-of-a-Co-ed no more than Shakespeare repeats a question. Of course this doesn't always work. There are cases when one's only refuge is actually to know one's lesson, and of course, one studies for that kind of class; there's a sort of perverted survival of the fittest about it.

One rather interesting thing occurred. It seems that the coming of a new Co-ed is heralded ahead at a great rate. I had no idea that I was such an event! But I discovered through the breach of faith of one of the parties concerned that a bet had been laid before I even appeared on the Hill, that one of the students who boards here, would succumb to my charms within two weeks. Now that was bad enough. But the worst of it was the stake. It was Fifty Cents! and the student paid. (It was a very impressionable student). If the amount had been thirty cents the situation would have been perfect. I should not have minded being betted about for a gold piece, even the smallest, but a paltry fifty cents! It is too much for the equilibrium of a Co-ed!

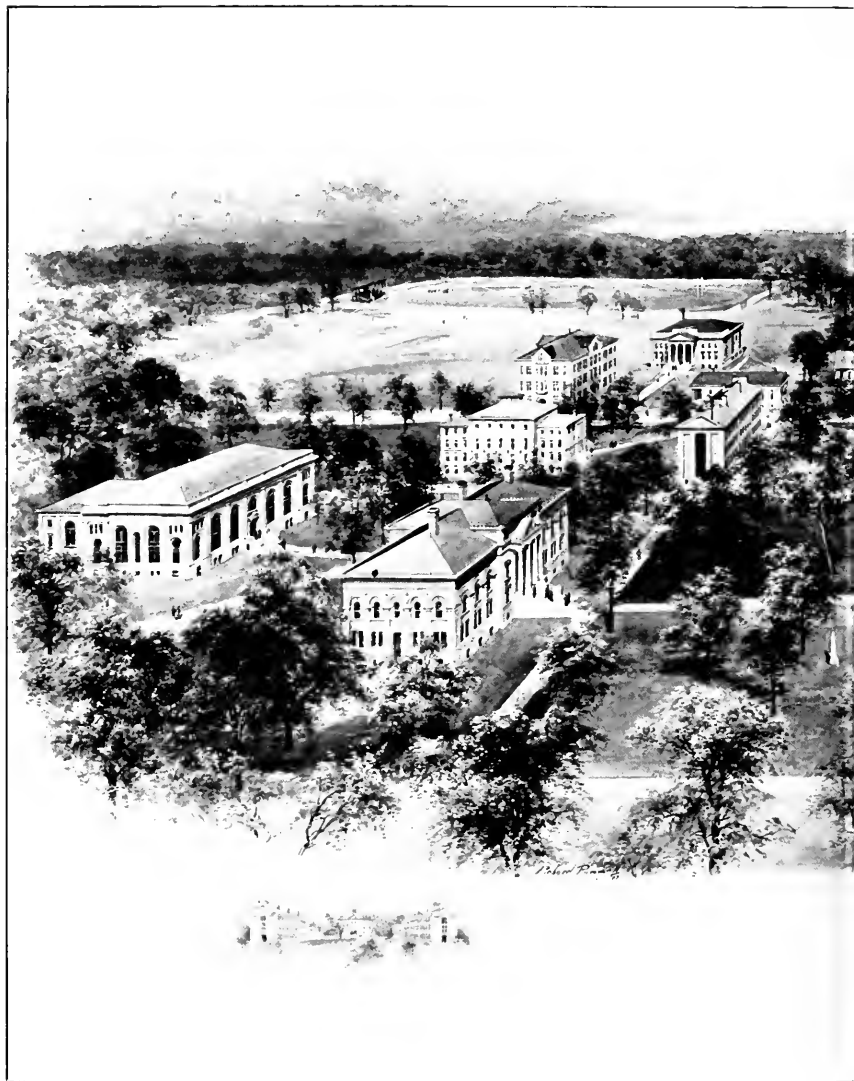

My impressions are too many and too varied to be given in one letter, even to you, so farewell for the present. More anon, from yours ever,

A.

MOONLIGHT

Over the fence lent a tender face,
I thought, tho' I saw but faintly;
Over her head the moonbeam's trace

Over her hands my own hands slid
And my heart went to my eyes
And her eye looked from a half-shut lid
With a glance of sweet surprise

While my heart with love was singing
Not a sound of its song was heard,
For a doubt at my heart was ringing
And a fear of the spoken word.

Over the fence I reached her waist
While as yet she made no sound,
But as I did her lips but taste—
That Gosh-derned fence fell down.

The Dialectic Society

Love of Virtue and Science

THE Dialectic Society was organized in 1795, shortly after the opening of the University. It is then, we may say, as old as the University itself; and, since its organization, its existence has been separably linked with that of the University. With the University, it has passed through the lights and shades that for more than a century have played in varying proportions over the fortunes of Carolina, and its growth has kept pace with the progress of the State and the University. Founded on the democratic principles of the brotherhood, the freedom, and the equality of mankind, it needs no compulsory means for preserving an artificial existence. Its existence is natural and its growth inevitable. Its principles, as leaven, have permeated the life of the University until the whole is leavened. Its numbers, consequently, have steadily increased, rather than diminished, since compulsory membership was abolished in 1891. More than two hundred names are now inscribed upon its roll of regular members, and with each succeeding year the number increases.

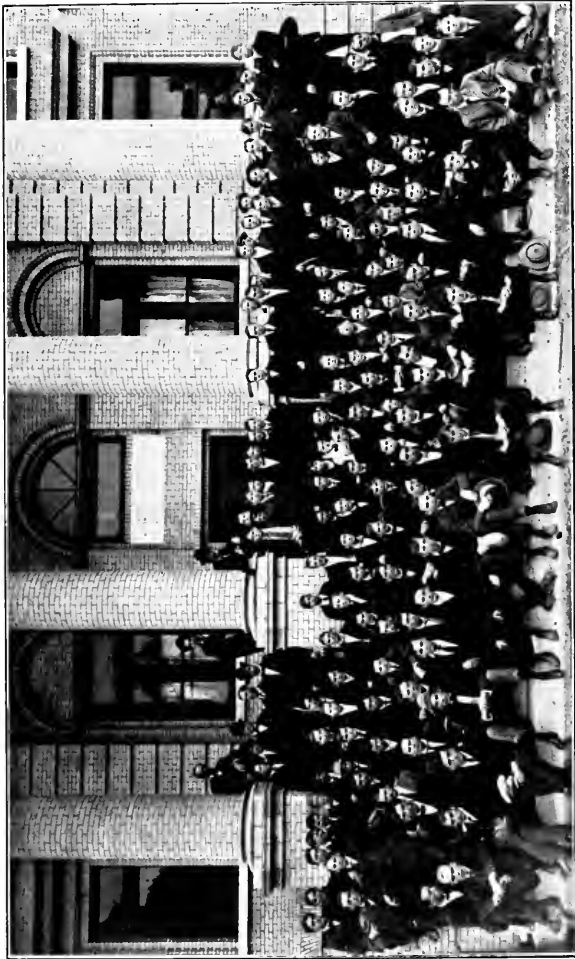

If the Dialectic Society has accomplished the purpose of its existence, its history ought to be one long record of service to the University and the State. In this purpose it has not failed. Its record vindicates the wisdom of its founders. With the Philanthropic Society, it has contributed strength and prestige to the University and has developed men who have moulded the policies of North Carolina and influenced those of the United States. It has, by its high moral standard, contributed mightily toward self-respect and self-government among the members of the student body. To incur the displeasure of the Society is a notoriety which no prudent member courts; while to be expelled from its membership is a crowning disgrace which even the most reckless strive to avoid. The bond of brotherhood which binds its members together enhances friendship among the students and strengthens their allegiance to their Alma Mater. The training it affords in debate has added to the prestige of the University among Southern, and even among Northern, universities. It has contributed its quota of men who have represented Carolina in debates with universities from Georgia to Pennsylvania. To the State it has furnished a long line of illustrious men who have gratefully acknowledged the benefits which they received from its training in debate and in parliamentary procedure. Indeed, a history of the prominent members of the Dialectic Society is in a large measure a history of the men who have moulded public opinion in North Carolina.

The past of the Society is then secure. Its future is bright with hope. The personnel of its membership is such as to enable us to feel that the work of the men who have labored for it in time gone by is to be wrought to a more perfect finish by the men who now compose its membership. A hundred years of glorious history and endearing tradition encourage us to go forward to greater achievements. The vantage ground which we now occupy enables us to hope that in the future, more than ever in the past, the Dialectic Society may be a source of strength to the University and of service to the State; that it may continue to inspire its members with increased love for the University, and that its walls may continue to echo to the youthful voice of the future judge, governor, senator, or diplomat.

Philanthropic Society

In 1795, the same year in which the University was founded, was organized what was known as "The Debating Society." Out of this Society, with its two or three members, has grown the Philanthropic Society of to-day.

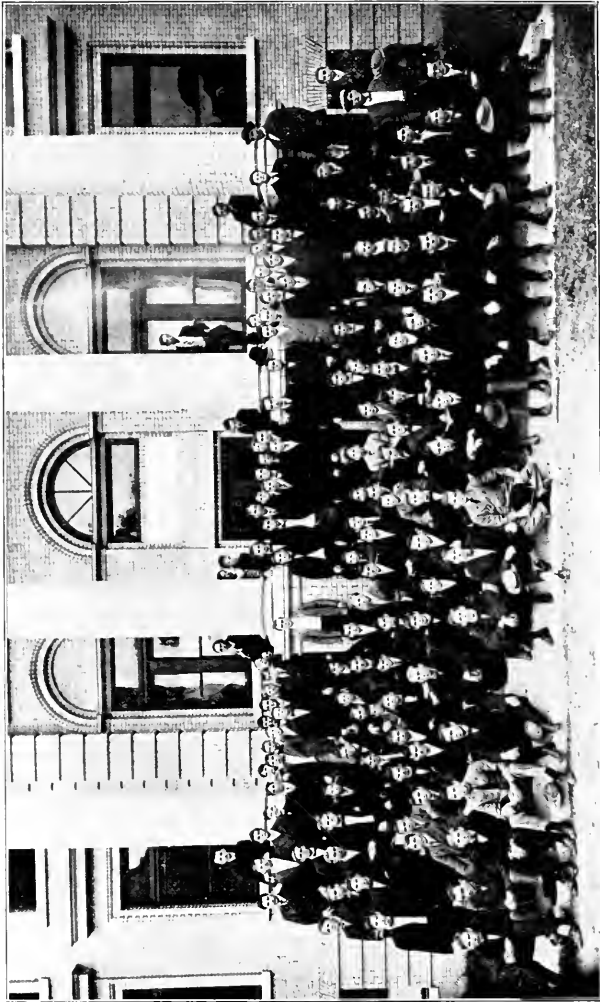

From its organization the Society has been inseparably linked with the life and destiny of the University. When the dark days of reconstruction cast their cloud over the University, then, too, the Society, which for seventy-three years has held its regular weekly meetings, closed its doors; but when the brighter days of 1875 came, the University was again opened, the Society was immediately re-organized, and since then its prosperity and growth has been continuous.

The history of the Society is one of which its members may justly be proud. Its walls are covered with the faces, as its roll is filled with the names of men who have left their impress on the hearts of their fellowmen and have built for themselves a place in the history of this country.

Passing hurriedly over the social features of the Society, among which may be mentioned, however, as shared in by the sister Dialectic Society, the Magazine, the Yackety Yack, the Star Course Entertainment, and the system of inter-society and inter-collegiate debates, let us consider it a moment in the light of a representative phase of college education.

It has been said that baseball and football are, aside from class room recitation itself, the most necessary requirements for a college. I am merely quoting when I say that you may take your exercise in other ways than by either playing football or baseball, but that in no other place than the society may you gain that gift of speech and familiarity with parliamentary procedure which will prove the lasting benefit of your life. To meet on a common level with our fellows, to lay aside social and class distinction, to be thrown upon our own wit and resources—that is the training which qualifies a man to be a leader of men; and it is this which the Society teaches.

And now if you have the idea that the Society is a relic of the past, whose success is to be measured in the past, eradicate it. Consider for a moment and you will realize that it is a great, live, breathing force. It is the heart of our University.

DEBATERS

DEBATING

PERHAPS there is no college activity in which Carolina has had such a decided success as in debating. Since our first inter-collegiate debate in 1897 we have had series of debates with Vanderbilt University, Johns Hopkins University, and the University of Georgia; and thus far we have not lost a series. At present we are engaged in a series of debates with the Philomathean Society of the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Virginia, George Washington University, and the University of Georgia.

The great success which we have had in these contests in the past, seems to be due to two things; our system of debating and the two literary societies, not as distinct from each other, but as supplementary to each other.

Our system of debating is one that has won the commendation of everyone who has become thoroughly acquainted with its workings. In our inter-collegiate contests the places on the various teams are competitive and are thrown open to every student of the University, who is a member of either of the literary societies. Thus each and every man has the same chance for a place on these teams. This naturally creates a great amount of interest and as a result we have every type of University man engaged in these contests. But second only in importance to these open contests is our system of scrub debating. Two men are chosen as a scrub debating team, and these bear the same relation to the regular team that the scrub athletic teams do to the Varsity. They defend the side of the question which the opposing University has, thus familiarizing the regular debaters with the opposite side as well as their own side of the question.

But back of this system of collecting and training our inter-collegiate debaters, stand the two literary societies, the real backbone of the whole system. It is here that the men get their first training, and lay the foundation for further development. Here we have weekly contests which are to train every member. The men most successful in these are elected as inter-society debaters, these being second in importance only to the inter-collegiate debaters. Thus there are three gradual stages in the development of a debater—weekly contests, inter-society debates, and the inter-collegiate contests.

PEACHES—PLEASE PASS THE CREAM

Rosa smiled a challenge,
And my heart began to thump;
For Rosa was a peach, you see,
And I—I was a chump.

Rosa was a peach I say—
Her eyes seemed to dare—
And I am fond of peaches,
Peaches with golden hair.

Rosa smiled a challenge,
I made a pretty speech,
(For I am but a man, my friend—
And Rosa was a peach).

"Oh, Rosa, Rosa," I declared,
"You are a ripe, red peach;
Yet one that hangs so very high
'Tis clear beyond my reach."

Rosa smiled demurely,
Then she glanced at me,
"If you want the peach," she said,
"Why don't you climb the tree?"

PRISCILLA

As suggested by the preceding drawing.

I thought: "A maid to whom this earth did seem Like to a great and gloomy prison cell,
With not one joy in life, no sweet day dream,
No cool and fragrant nook, as evening fell,
In which with blushing cheek and heaving breast
To hear some dear one breathe a tale of love;
Naught but the prayer, the hour of silent test,
The low words rising to the Great Above."

But no, fair maid, all this could never be;
The eyes devout—were lips of pouting red
Fashioned to pray through all eternity?
Ah, no; your pardon, maid; what have I said?
Although by Fate's decree my chance I've missed,
Despite those eyes, I'd swear you have been kissed!

THE GOLDEN FLEECE

THE year 1907-8 has been a notable one in University life. Every student feels, I suspect, whether he agrees with all that has been done or not, that it has been one of those unusual years in which college life rises above the level of routine monotony into genuine self-expression. Every student feels, too, no doubt, that despite temporary errors, great gains have been made.

In the agitation that characterized the first part of the year there were great differences of opinion. There was disagreement approaching violence; but in the end there was solid and hearty agreement. This result did not come from temporary compromise, nor painful self-sacrifice on the part of anybody, nor outright defeat of one faction by another. What finally happened was this: representatives of various phases of college life came together and meetings where it was expected that the rights, factions and fractions of college life were to be fought for, became meetings where the welfare of the University was the united consideration. Nobody denounced the other side while proclaiming himself a patriot; everybody, with simplicity and directness, tried to find the practical way to the best and most helpful thing for the college.

I doubt if in the history of the college opposing factions ever came together with less suspicion of motives, and with less display of partizanship. Frankness and a high endeavor to be University men made apparently hopeless agreement easy.

This is set down here not in praise of the wisdom or generosity of these particular representatives of the divisions of University life. It was not a question of wisdom, and the result was after all the achievement of the college. The feeling of the college brought it about. The college has, for several years, been coming into a consciousness of its solidarity as a community. It has steadily been coming to have what may be called a national consciousness. This year the idea of the University, as a group, has taken hold powerfully of the student mind and the whole college thrills under it.

Some things that have been done recently appear as altogether the work of the year, but they are in reality the culmination of what has been going on for several years. Various illustrations might be given of individuals, and groups of individuals, and for movements for this or that general thing, trying to express the community feeling! Just when it became persistently manifest it is not possible to say, but one of its early manifestations was the Golden Fleece, organized in 1904.

This organization was different from the few clubs then in existence in just this respect: it was not sectional, social, athletic, or scholarly—it sought to bring together the best from the whole. It sought to realize the national consciousness. It sought by bringing together the best scholar, the best athlete, the best debater, the best social man, the best writer, the best all-round man, to present a composite picture of the University man. Instead of being a factional or fractional club it hoped to be a confederative and integral club. The business of the club so organized was to discuss University affairs in a liberal mood of sympathy, to make a constructive council that would summarize the loyal intent of representative citizens to do whatever might be done to foster the general good.

This is the meaning of The Golden Fleece. It is a part of the University Movement—a feeling of national consciousness that I believe is now the dominating mood of the college.

The Phi Beta Kappa Society

THE historic honorary society, Phi Beta Kappa, was founded at the College of William and Mary in the birth year of our nation, December 5th, 1776.

It is the oldest of American college societies and is the parent of the Greek letter fraternities. For the first fifty-five years of its existence Phi Beta Kappa was a secret fraternity devoted to literature, science, and philosophy, and to the promotion of friendly intercourse among scholars. In 1831 John Quincy Adams, Joseph Story, and Edward Everett, fearing that the secrets of the Harvard Chapter were leading it to "depths of iniquity," induced its members to appear on the campus and publicly divulge the secrets which had been the mystery and inspiration of the society. Since then Phi Beta Kappa has been non-secret. It at once assumed a purely formal existence, meeting annually for the election of members and again at Commencement when some gifted Phi Beta Kappa would deliver an oration and another read a poem. This condition of inactivity existed until 1881 when the Harvard Chapter again took action that marked another epoch in the growth of the society. It called a meeting to consider ways and means of injecting new life into the isolated Chapters and of bringing them into closer union. The conferences and discussions led, in 1882, the adoption of a new constitution of the "United Chapters of the Phi Beta Kappa Society" which provided for an annual meeting of a National Council, and thus brought the Chapters nearer together. To-day Phi Beta Kappa stands as a great "American aristocracy of scholarship and character," whose purposes are "To encourage the love of letters and sound learning, and to keep active the pure flame of truth."

The Greek letters, ΦΒΚ, on the badge of the society, stand for Philosophia, Bion Kybernetes—"Philosophy, the guide of life."

The history of Phi Beta Kappa at this institution may be given in few words. Our Chapter had its origin in the Alpha Theta Phi Society which was founded here on March 23rd, 1804, by Dr. H. C. Tolman, at that time Professor of Sanskrit and Acting Professor of Greek in the University. This society was modeled after the Phi Beta Kappa. Its object was to "stimulate and increase a desire for sound scholarship," and admission into it was based upon high scholastic attainments. It had an honorable and useful career for ten years and was in a flourishing condition at the end of that time when it became ambitious and applied for admission into the ancient National Society.

On September 7th, 1904, the National Council of Phi Beta Kappa, at its eighth triennial meeting, considered our application and granted a charter to the University of North Carolina. On the 7th of November following, Alpha Chapter of North Carolina was organized here, the members of Alpha Theta Phi becoming charter members of the Alpha Chapter. And thus Alpha Theta Phi "passed into the larger life of Phi Beta Kappa."

To become eligible for membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society at this institution a student must, during the first three years of his course, attain a grade of at least ninety-two and one-half per cent., and failure in one subject during that period renders him ineligible. The Phi Beta Kappa is one society that puts a premium on scholarship and character and earnest endeavor and conditions membership upon these things and these alone. Its influence upon the intellectual life of the University has been, and must continue to be, wholesome and elevating.

—N. W. WALKER.

THE NON-FRAT

IT is my purpose to say a word about the non-fraternity man. However, it must be borne in mind that this article is not the only recognition that the non-frat receives on the pages of this annual. Yet in the spirit of fairness it is well to say a few words about the non-frat, as such.

At least four-fifths of the men at this institution do not belong to fraternities. Some of these men would like to become fraternity men, some scarcely give the matter a thought, while others are non-fraternity men because their convictions lead them to be. This last is the true non-frat type.

This non-frat sees in the fraternity an artificial restraint upon the free play of those feelings that produce friendship and brotherly love. He believes that the fraternity sets up a false standard of measurement. The non-frat, himself, stands for individuality, for subjective as opposed to objective standards, and he believes above all in being a free lance.

Twelve years ago the fraternity men were dominant in what is known as college politics. The fight was then begun by the non-frat element because they did not believe that merit was being sufficiently recognized. To-day practically all of the affairs of college life are under the control of the non-frats, and we believe that none of the things upon which they have laid their hands have suffered by their touch. On the contrary the general condition of college life has been bettered. The various factions and parties have come to know and to respect each other, and we have a clearer atmosphere to live and breathe in. But during these years of political struggle the social affairs of college continued to be in the hands of the fraternities. The non-fraternity man gave up his social ambitions and turned to other lines of development. He took as if a matter of course that the fraternity man should play the important part at dances and the like, while he should devote himself to scholarship and debating. Except in a few cases this has been true up to the present time. But now the non-frat has asserted his right to share in the social affairs of college, and the fraternity man has recognized the justice of this demand. So, it is not too much to hope that, at some time in the near future, we may have every honor and every privilege of our college life placed upon an individual basis.

To make individual fitness the standard has been the fight of the non-frat. Of course it is an ideal standard. The ideas of aristocracy are too firmly planted in what we call democratic North Carolina to be up-rooted at once. But we believe that the non-frat of this institution represents in a fair manner the claims of democracy. Let these claims be granted and we believe that our problems of college politics will be solved.

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 21, 1908.

Mr. Robert McPeters:—

I am returning you under separate cover all photographs, all letters, and such other trifles as might serve to remind me that I had ever known you. You already have your ring.

You will of course take a similar action as regards any of my possessions you may have. It is my wish that we be strangers.

Hoping you will accede at once to my request, I am,

Yours truly,

GRACE RANSOM.

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 22, 1908.

Mr. Robert McPeters,

Dear Sir:—You are hereby notified that an examination on Philosophy will be given you May 23 at 2:00 o'clock, at the residence of Professor Williams. You are aware that you have failed twice on this examination, and it is required for graduation. Only on account of your recent illness is this last opportunity given you. I must insist that you take this examination, as otherwise you will not be allowed to graduate.

examination, as otherwise you will not be allowed to graduate.

Yours truly,

THE DEAN.

May 23, half-past one.

Bobby:—

You were right the other day, and I was wrong. I am sorry I wrote as I did, and want you to forgive me. You will, won't you, Bobby?

Unless you do I am not going to stay for Commencement. It is nearly two now. Come a little after and bring my ring, and I will stay. If you do not come I will know you are angry, and go on the three o'clock train. You see, Bobby, it's you I'd stay for and if you don't want me—?

Remember, Bobby dear, by two if you want

GRACE.

THE Young Men's Christian Association is recognized today as one of the most important forces in the development of University men. This organization is responsible in no small degree for the fine type of manhood that goes out each year from the walls of this institution. Men here have realized that the aim of the Young Men's Christian Association is to develop not an organization whose membership is composed of the weak, effeminate, "goody-goody" sort, but an organization made up of virile, strong, clean, Christian men—men who will not stoop to the low and mean, men whose motives are actuated by principles of justice and right and whose actions are the result of Christian character.

The Association works upon the principle that the more a man puts into this work, the more he gets out of it. The result, then, of a participation in the work and activities of the Association is mutual service to one's fellowstudents and self-development. There are several phases of the work, and participation in any particular branch is open to any member. What are, then, some of the activities of the Association? Two religious meetings are held each week,—the Tuesday night meeting, a general meeting led usually by a member of the faculty, having an average attendance of about 90. A small prayer meeting is held on Thursday night. The Association Bible Classes number about 20, and great interest in this work is attested by the fact that there is an enrollment of 200. Association members do a large work among the country Sunday Schools in the immediate vicinity of the University. Foreign missions is encouraged, and last year the students gave $200 to this cause. The Association also conducts a number of mission classes, brings several lyceum attractions to the Hill during the year, publishes without cost to the students the Directory and the Handbook, and, lastly but by no means least, provides by means of its new building a social center for the students. The building is equipped with games, reading room and comfortable chairs, and withal is a most important force in bringing students together.

The work, then, of the Young Men's Christian Association is large and varied, and students and faculty alike realize that it fills a most important niche in University life. The Y. M. C. A. then seeks to be helpful and to surround a man with wholesome influences, and our hope is that it will have more and more the confidence and esteem of the student-body as the years come and go.

The College Newspaper: Its Pains and Its Pleasures.

H. B. GUNTER

I AM not a theorist; nor do I swear by abstractions. But having a personal interest in college newspapers, I found myself wondering what place a paper had ought to have in a college like, for instance, our University, and likewise I found myself wondering if the game were worth the candle, if a paper like The Tar Heel justifies its existence, if it were worth the weekly sweating and swearing it calls forth—for, believe me, it is not, as the street would say, by any means a cinch to publish each week a paper even so small as The Tar Heel.

The weekly program is not inviting:

On Friday the misery begins. On the Wednesday night preceding, after the paper has been put to press and all is serene, those whose business it is to see that it gets there without any glaring mistakes (of which, according to the statement of a distinguished member of the faculty at a certain festive board last spring, the printing establishment of the University is often guilty): I say, after it has been put to press by those whose business it is, which, being interpreted, means me, the said those betake themselves to their room and, forsooth, seek pleasant recreation. Thursday is an off day. The printers, distributing the type, are too busy to call upon the editor for copy, and he, left to his own devices, makes good use of his time, usually by loafing around the postoffice and Kluttz's store.

But, as remarked before, the misery begins on Friday. The printers begin their demand for copy, and copy must be forthcoming; for the editor, having an intimate knowledge of the ways of printers, knows that their demand must be met or there will be trouble in The Tar Heel camp. So the editorial we seats himself and grinds it out—enough for present demands. On Friday night he must needs emanate more brilliant stuff in order to keep the typos busy on Saturday. On Sunday the editorials—but let us draw a sheltering veil over this day: Suffice it to say that on Monday morning there appears copy enough for that day and part of Tuesday. But that other part of Tuesday must be provided for, and Monday night is given to this task. Tuesday night and Wednesday morning are devoted to gathering and getting into shape news that happens here and there on the campus and throughout the town—town news in which the students are interested.

Up to this point the editor-in-chief may call upon the associate editors for help in his trouble. He may send one to cover the University sermon, another to cover the Tuesday night meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association, and still another to secure a list of the new books in the library. But now he has no friendly shoulders upon which to trust the work, much less the responsibility. He must needs shed coat, collar, respect for conventional language, and roll up his sleeves, for on Wednesday afternoon and night cometh the culmination of the misery. Then the sweating and swearing spoken of hereinbefore are very much in evidence. In the afternoon the proofs must be read, stray heads must be set, and the type must be prepared in final shape to be dumped into the form soon after evening meal has been partaken of. All this is bothersome to the soul. Sometimes the proof is so bad that when the editorial pencil has ceased its gyrations, the sheet resembles a huge spider's web. Perchance here and there a word has been left out and the editorial pencil pauses, the editorial eye looks this way and that over the sheet to see if there is a word that may be cut out for the convenience of the man who sets the type—for, as has been remarked before, the editor knows the way of the men who perpetuate the thoughts of mankind for the edification of a dying world. Sometimes there is such a word, sometimes there is not; and when there is not, some one else besides the editor indulges in the afore-mentioned sweating and swearing.

The evening repast mentioned previously is usually, to say the least, partaken of in a way that is not good for the digestive organs. With an injunction to some friend to "Please bring my mail for me," the editor betakes himself to the hot and steamy little print shop, and there sometimes for an hour and a half, sometimes for two hours and a half, yea, verily, sometimes for four hours and a half, he remains. It all depends on that elusive goddess, Luck—that goddess that figures so prominently in the religion of printers the world over.

The weekly program has been set forth. Is the game worth the candle? What functions should the college newspaper have? In the first place and above all others I should say that it is to give the news. But the objector is heard to say with a great deal of truth that the larger proportion of the readers, namely, the students, always know beforehand all the news that will appear. Well, why print the stuff if everyone knows it beforehand? Often have I found myself, when I pick up a newspaper, reading first of all the news about which I know most. For instance, when I secure a copy of The News and Observer, I turn first of all to the Chapel Hill news, to read about the football game, every detail of which I saw; to read about the meeting of the Modern Literature Club, at which I was present; to read about the concert of the Schubert String Quartette, every scratch of which I heard. So, inasmuch as I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that the lamp of experience; or in other words, as I have but one measure in which to measure my fellowmen, and that my own half bushel, I have come to the conclusion that my fellows are like me in the respect that they delight to read the news about which they know most. In addition to this, the weekly paper gives the students the advantage of having the news before them in such a way that they may get a view of the whole week's happenings in the perspective, so to speak. Not a lot of scattered details is it. They get a view of the whole, just as in preparing for examinations they get a grasp of the whole subject, whereas before they had only scattered knowledge of the parts.

And others there are for whom the news is prepared. The alumni who retain a live interest in affairs at their alma mater need a college paper in order to keep in touch with the students and the faculty. Of course, in their opinion, the youths who tread the campus now are by no means the intellectual giants who haunted the classical shades of song and story when they were young, but nevertheless, they are interested in their doings: they want to see if the old ship is still safe in the hands of those youngsters. For the sake, then, of the alumni, the college newspaper should be a faithful reflector of the campus life, should be, so to speak, a bulletin board upon which are posted the doings of students and faculty.

It should, however, be more than a mere bulletin board: it should be the reflector of the campus thought. If the editor-in-chief expresses opinions or gives publicity to views that are opposed to those of any student, that student has a perfect right to reply with an article in the paper, lest the world think that the editor's way of thinking is that of the whole student body. And any fair-minded editor, being always eager to get the other fellow's point of view, will give space to such articles gladly and freely.

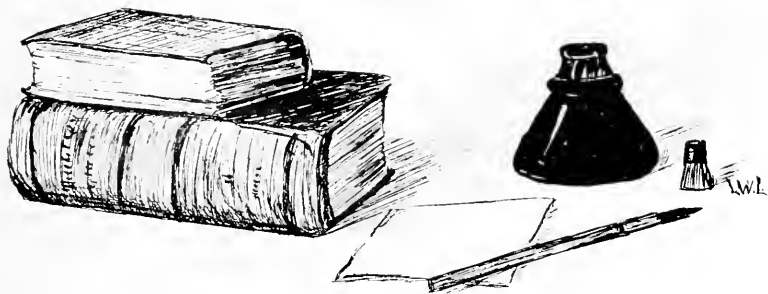

The editorial columns are distinctly for the opinions of the editor and he should not hesitate to take advantage of them to the fullest extent. The truly conscientious editor pauses not to see in what manner his views will be received by the students, but expresses them freely and frankly, first having satisfied himself, however, that he is in the right—that is, so far as he can understand what the right is, for often it is a hard matter, one difficult of decision, to know exactly what to render unto Caesar. But a paper, college or otherwise, that has within its columns no editorial matter is as a wishy-washy rag and undeserving of consideration.

The two things that a college newspaper should aim at, then, are faithfully and in an unbiased manner to reflect the happenings on the campus for the benefit of students, faculty, and alumni, and to show forth, in so far as possible, the campus thought.

But when an editor has these things well in mind, he has by no means settled the whole problem of newspaper life. Every week there arises the whole problem of what to print and what not to print—the question of all questions the most important in the newspaper world. As the late Isaac Erwin Avery once remarked in his column of idle comments: "The impulse to write things that should not be written is one of the most fearsome problems in the newspaper business. Murders, hangings, hotel building, tea parties, fights, industrial deals—these and a lot of other matters that are told in the open are chronicled as a matter of course, but the newspaper man pauses, trembling, before the things that happen and yet are discussed in a whisper. * * * The unprintable things would be read by the world, no matter if the world's eyes protruded in horror: and nobody knows this any better than a newspaper man. Sometimes the danger line between the questionable and the unquestionable is not clearly defined, and in the hurry of a print shop there must occasionally come an inclination to err in favor of sensation. The writer is positive that he could get out one issue of this paper that would be read and re-read by everybody in the country, but he would never assist in getting out another issue. He'd be killed by a dozen or so different people, though all that he had written would have been true."

Ah! that is the real problem, and the settling of it—the settling that makes a man think and weigh the effects, this settling alone, aside from the good a paper does, makes the game worth the candle, compensates for the trouble, and makes the newspaper life worth living.

The Athlete

“HIS was a superb figure, showing the athlete in every line.” Why the use of that word superb? Is it not because in every nation the athlete calls for the highest of praise? Let us go back to the earliest of literature and art and we will find that everywhere the athlete and his prowess are made the subject of song and story and put into marble that lasts until this day.

In the days of King Arthur and the Round Table, Lancelot, for his deeds, was termed “The Lion of the Lists,” and we find that in that age the greatest men in the kingdom were the ones who stood ready and were able to defend their claims against all comers. Was not the wrestler, the boxer, the disk thrower, and the athlete put into marble by sculptors whose work is still the wonder of all who see it, and, too, will the runner of Marathon ever be forgotten? Why this honor and notice if they did not justly deserve it?

Coming still further down the years and to our own continent, we find that the great chiefs of the “original Americans” were the men who, by their endurance and personal power, could vanquish all others.

In the olden days men strove in harness of steel for the honor of their sweetheart—to-day they strive in harness of leather, or muscle, for the honor of their Alma Mater.

What position does the athlete hold in college life? “The highest,” one may well answer. A man enters college obscure, unknown, among hundreds of others. He is seen, sized up, and induced to enter athletics. Then begins in truth his training for the world he is to go out into. He is taught to think and to think quickly, to act on his own judgment and to act quickly; to control himself and to control others, or to submit to control; to act in conjunction with others, and to lend his strength and body to make a part of one great power that is striving toward the end—success. And above all things he is taught to love fair play and to fight till the last.

By his ability he is known, by his conduct he is judged. He is looked up to, sought after and encouraged. A man who, if he had forgone athletics would have known few, is brought into touch with many. He meets intimately men of every type and from each he absorbs some little that will aid him in his life work. He is given new ideas, broader ideas, and made to see life from many sides. He is carried with the team and visits "new places and strange lands" and every day adds something useful to his store of knowledge.

When he leaves college he is put aside—forgotten? Not so. He leaves with hundreds of others, each of whom know his worth, his ability, his determination, his manliness. And this knowledge is not confined to his college mates for his fame has gone abroad and there are many others who have seen him proven on diamond, track, or gridiron. He settles in some town and, perhaps, in after years, a man is needed in that town. "Why so-and-so lives there. We were at college together—a famous tackle—a fine fellow." And the business is put in his hands.

Recently a lawyer, after trying for three days to procure certain information, chanced to remark that he was a Princeton man. "Why," said the other man "I remember you. You were a freshman my last year and I remember reading about you after I left." And in less than two hours the lawyer had all the information he wished.

Nearly every nation has its national sport, and baseball is the national game of America. But though not played everywhere, the American football seems most typical of the world at large. As we look around us, do we not see typified in business life the football team? Here the man who as full, backs up his line, watches the play of his opponents, forestalls the trick plays, and throws himself in the hole through which, but for him alone, they would have secured a great gain. Here the fast, flashy, half who, following his interference, circles the ends for long gains, is tackled, but struggles on till overwhelmed. Or the stocky line bucking half who, when called on, with head low, would dive into the line were it a stone wall, and with sheer strength gains his distance. In this man, manager of great railroads or corporations, we see the great quarter-back, the general of the team, who finds the weak spots in the enemy's team, and hurls his team now here, now there, handling it as though it were one great body and overcoming all obstacles. The fast end, too, is seen on whom we depend to go down the field alone, and alone tackle the runner in his track and prevent the hoped-for gain, or who breaks the interference so that his followers can throw the runner for a loss. Here and there we see the quiet, hard-working giant well termed the guard, who, refusing to be pushed aside, stands like a rock against the rush or throws himself under the oncoming play. Perhaps it is the tackle strong and quick on whom the general depends to make the hole, or the center who, not content with doing his work, surely and will must needs break through and tackle with the ends.

And we may go still further, for on the side lines we see the substitutes, men who may be good but in whom there is something lacking that keeps them from being on the world's team; or, men who are waiting, just waiting for some one to weaken, to give out, and then they will have the chance to fill his place—and perhaps fill it even better than he did. And in the grand stand are the men and women who paid their way in and who sit back and calmly watch the strugg'le and yet do nothing towards the great end.

The world is the gridiron and the game is always on. Each one must fill some position and some one must decide which.

VARSITY FOOTBALL TEAM 1907

Football

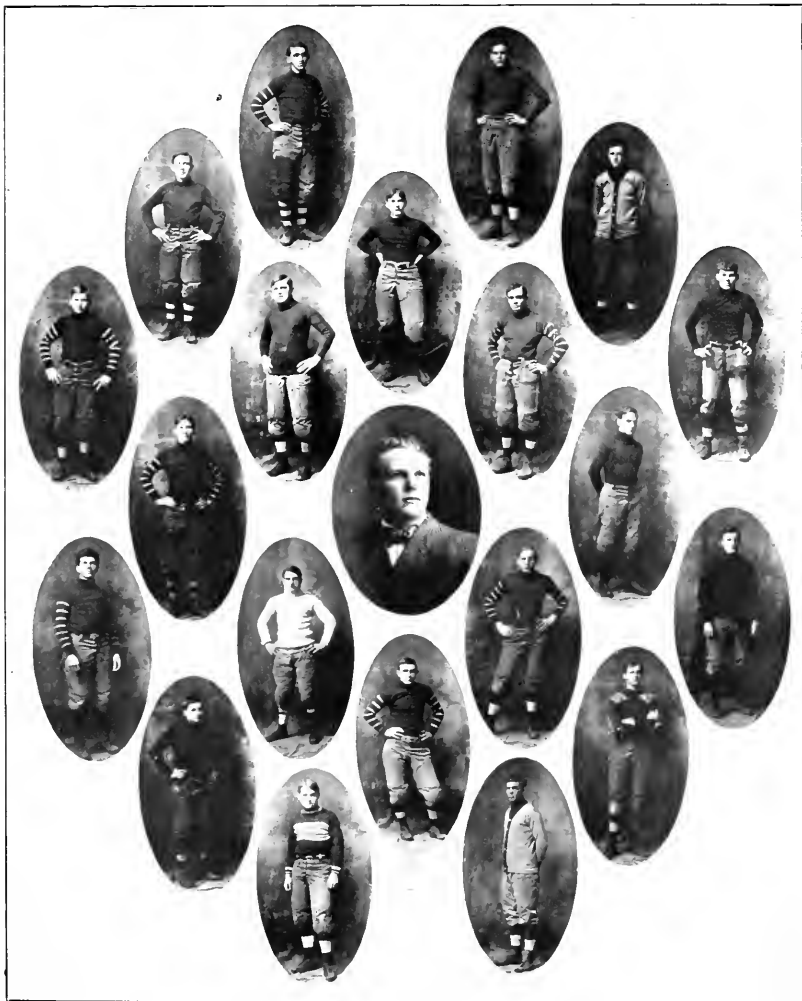

THE team of 1907 accomplished a great deal, but under circumstances more adverse perhaps than any time in the history of football at this institution. In the very first week of the season Story, our captain, died. This caused sadness throughout the whole college and created a vacancy on the team which could not be filled. Add to this a scarcity of men large enough to meet the requirements of lineman, and a lack of seasoned material, and you will have an idea of the task which confronted Dr. Lamson, our coach.

With a never-lagging energy, however, Dr. Lamson went to work and although the team which lined up against Pennsylvania three weeks after the season opened was decisively defeated, yet, when we consider that only four men of that team had played in a Varsity game before, we cannot but wonder that they played as well as they did. A week later Washington and Lee, with a veteran team, was held to a no-score game. Oak Ridge and William and Mary were decisively defeated in order. For the first time in many years the Virginia game was played in mid-season. While defeated by a score of 9-4, our team showed such evidences of great strength that many were inclined to believe that had Virginia held her usual place on our schedule, there would have been a different ending. Clemson, five days later, found the team stiff and sore and won a much desired victory. Georgetown and Richmond College were defeated in succession. On Thanksgiving Day, V. P. I. defeated us by a decisive score, yet each team scored only one touchdown. The excellent defensive work of our team, when the goal was threatened, was made of none effect by the masterly drop-kicking of the Techs. quarter-back, who secured three goals out of four trials.

We feel that the season of 1907 accomplished things. Of two of these we are especially proud. It demonstrated in the first place, that, under our new eligibility rules, a team of strength and capability could be placed in the field to represent the University, thereby proving the wisdom of those who promoted these rules. It left in addition a definite nucleus to build upon for another year and this makes the outlook for next season most promising.

For these things we thank Dr. Lamson and his 1907 team.

SCRUB FOOTBALL TEAM 1907

To the Scrub

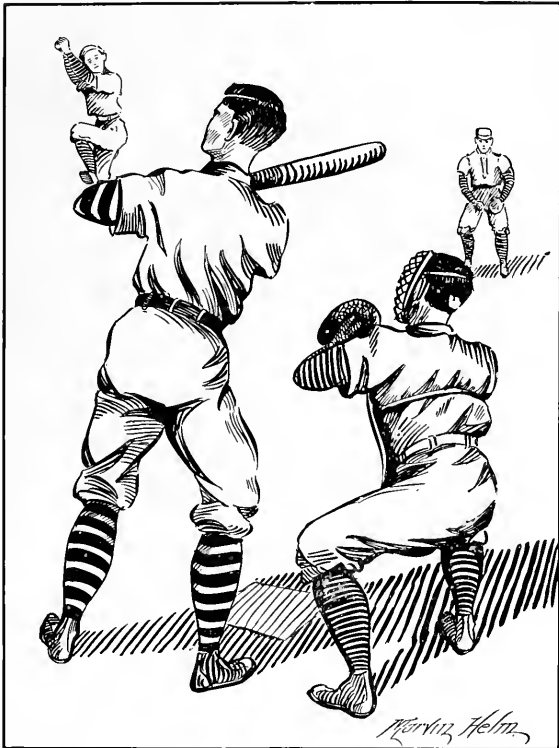

DID you ever stop to think when you were admiring the splendid team work, the machine-like accuracy, the exact precision of play, of position, of movement, that so marks a well-trained football team—did you ever stop to think, I say, of the “scrub” who made it all possible? Did you ever stop to wonder at the work it took to bring those eleven men to work like one? Did you ever stop to ask yourself, “How can those men play so together? Where did they get all that practice?” Did you ever stop thinking “Varsity” to think “Scrub?”

If not, pause here a moment. That guard weighs two hundred. He has been playing all fall against a one hundred and sixty-pound “scrub.” That tackle weighs one hundred and eighty. His “scrub” weighs only one hundred and fifty. That hundred and sixty pound half has been running into—and often over—a hundred and forty pound “scrub.” Not once, or twice, or three times, but six days out of the week, four weeks out of the month, three months on end. Not once in an afternoon, but four, five, a dozen times, till “the Coach” is satisfied. It’s “Hit him lower,” “Get into him harder,” “That’s better, knock him down, and keep him down;” “No, harder, harder, HARDER,” “Here, you scrub tackle”—or end or half, as the case may be—“get down there again,” and the Coach shows the Varsity man how it’s done. The scrub picks himself up, comes back—goes through it all again. That’s where the Varsity gets its team work, its form, its real strength.

What does the scrub get out of it? He may get one free trip to some big game, and he may get a game or two himself with some Prep. school off the Hill, but that is about all, and he is not certain of that. What he is certain of is work, more work, harder work, meaner work than any Varsity man ever did. He is a “scrub,” of no account to his College in the big games, never mentioned in the papers as one of the stars, not even getting his sweater. All he is good for is to be run into, and down and over till the Varsity is up to top notch. He is laughed at by many, scorned by some, admired by a few. “He is only a “scrub.”

But let him stop, let him slack off at all, let him remember that he is a scrub, and see the effect upon the Varsity. A team varies in direct ratio to its scrub. The stronger the scrub the stronger the Varsity, the weaker the scrub the weaker the Varsity. He is the backbone of our college teams, the foundation of our athletics; he is the spirit of the University, and so I say to you, Mr. Varsity-man, and to you, Mr. College Student, and to you, Mr. Spectator—“Hats off, and Here’s to the scrub.”

The Baseball Season of 1907

THE baseball season of 1907, though not the most brilliant in the history of the University, was far from being a failure. At the opening of the season the prospects were very bright, in spite of the fact that only one of the Varsity pitchers of 1906 had returned to college. However, with seven N. C. men to build on, together with good material from the "Scrubs" of 1906, the prospects for a successful season were very good indeed.

The real opening of the baseball season was not under the most auspicious circumstances. In the first place, the late spring made it impossible for the team to get that very important preliminary training, which is so absolutely necessary to the making of any team. Again, the team was much handicapped by not having a proper place to practice in the early part of the season. The diamond was not in condition for practice till the very opening of the season, and not always then.

Although the practice was late in beginning, once started the competition for the various places on the team was fierce and interesting. The infield positions were practically all filled with the exception of short-stop and first base. In the out-field it was different—the only sure man here being "Old War-Horse" Story, who had played centre-field on the team of 1906. The hardest fight in the in-field was for short-stop,—Whitaker and Fountain being the candidates. It may incidentally be mentioned that the success of Fountain will show what hard work will do. He received all the knocks, disappointments and "tin-cans" to which a candidate is liable, but doggedly kept in the fight until he won the coveted N. C. He ran the whole gamut of baseball life,—class, all-class, "Scrub" and Varsity. Our coach found some difficulty in selecting a man for the initial sack. Finally, however, he found a freshman who had all the qualifications of a first-sacker,—and the way that freshman developed was marvelous. Nobody can dispute the fact that we were deficient in the pitching department. Captain Thompson, commonly known as "Bull," was, in fact, the only reliable twirler. Morrow pitched good ball, but the fates were against him.

However, despite the severe criticism to which we were subjected, we may safely say our season was a success. Never before had there been such perfect spirit between men and coach. Everybody liked "Coach" Simmons, and justly. Never before had the men on the team been on such good terms. It was a hard luck season, but it was characterized by our usual "stick to it" spirit. The men played for Carolina, first, last, and all the time, and those little personal troubles so often ruinous to a team, were entirely absent.

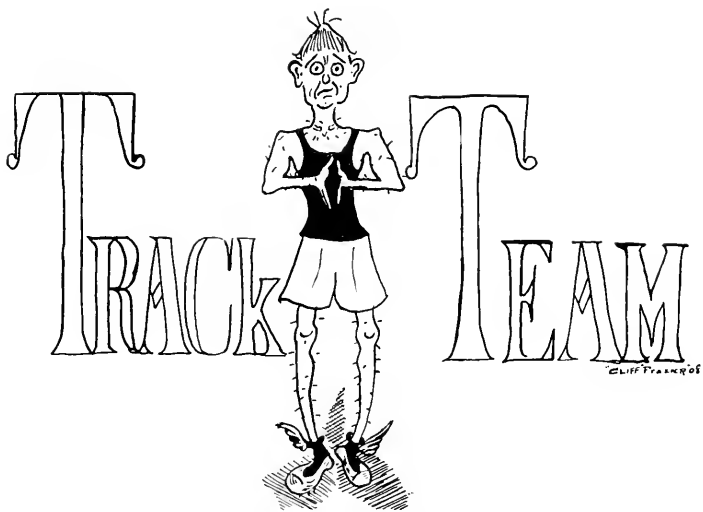

Finally, if we descend to the more material plane of "run-getting," we were not so unsuccessful as many thought. A glance at the following table will show how we stood, both as regards runs and games.

CAPTAIN TRACK TEAM 1908

Track Athletics

HERE is no denying that for the past few years Track Athletics in the University have been poorly treated, both as to financial support on the part of the authorities, and as to bodily support on the part of the students. There has been a sad set-back since the days of Osborne and Faust and Shull when a N. C. Track Team won the S. I. A. A. championship at New Orleans beating Tulane, Vanderbilt and Texas.

Now we seem to have our hands full to beat Clemson and more than full to collect funds for the trip. It is a crying shame that the manager of a Varsity team should have to beg $5 from this member of the Faculty, $2 from that, $1 from this student, 50 cents from another, to make one trip possible. As soon as it is possible to promise men a good trip, more of them will come out, but so long as a single trip is in doubt up to the last moment men won't come out and work. What they want is an N. C., and if they do not have a chance to win that, three months of hard training scares them off.

Last year the men we had were good, but they would have been better if they had been pushed. On two events—high hurdles and pole vault—there was only one contestant, and while he did his best under the circumstances, a close second man would have helped materially. With such men last year as McNeill Dunlap and Pittman, it was not so hard to put out at best a fair team. With such men this year as Bridgers, Lyle, Winborne and Everett, it should not be difficult to put out a better one. Once restarted, Track Athletics will grow, but we need more men, and better support. We must have them, if our Track Team is worthy the name.

Tennis

TENNIS has heretofore played a minor role in college athletics because of the scarcity of good courts in the University. The popularity of the game has been evidenced by crowded courts—such as they were—every afternoon in good weather, but not until this year has the demand for good courts been realized from a practical standpoint and movement started to supply this demand.

The Tennis Association made a good movement last year when it instigated the system of prize tournaments, in which a number of prizes were awarded to those members winning a place. The result of this movement was shown this year when the Association started off with the largest number of members in its history, and we might say, with competent officers. These officers had the interest of the Association at heart and accomplished a great thing for tennis in the University when they obtained ground from the faculty and started the erection of eight courts directly behind the gymnasium. These courts are well under way at the present writing and it is an assured thing that they will be completed and kept in good shape.

The above conditions should accord to tennis its proper position as a branch of college athletics, and should serve as a means by which more good tennis players can be developed in the University.

Only a slight review of the season is necessary. Tournaments were played in the fall with Wake Forest and Guilford at Chapel Hill, both of which resulted in victories for Carolina. The annual tournament with Virginia was scheduled at Charlottesville but was called off by Virginia on account of her association not being well organized. The Varsity Team probably put up the fastest game of any pair that has represented the University in years.

FOOTBALL

Class Athletics

FROM the standpoint of inter-class games at the University there has been launched an old idea upon a new sea. It is true the launching was not without some difficulty and that it has not been all smooth sailing, yet the system of developing class teams and the method of determining inter-class contests and championships has been firmly established and the beginning of the athletic strength of our University is yet in its infancy.

To be concise, the situation of class athletics may be divided into two parts: first, the object; secondly, the result. In the adoption of this system of athletics at the University it was probably the primary object of the trustees to encourage men to try for athletic teams, who were not and possibly never could be, varsity material, and to bring out great numbers of men who were desirous of elevating their physical standard individually, as well as those who were ambitious to do something for their class. The object, then, of the trustees has undoubtedly been realized, and the result attained has been little short of marvelous.

Secondly, the result of this system of developing class teams has been most gratifying from the fact that it not only has had a tendency to raise the standard of the teams, but has caused a better feeling to exist among the men collectively and individually. It is a fact that to know a man's value, one must test it; to test his worth means struggle and competition: to struggle with a man in fair play is to bring about admiration and respect, and this is precisely what has been done in the past football season on the inter-class gridiron.

The teams representing the classes have been well conditioned, consequently they were able to work, and did work hard; they were never lacking in energy and spirit, as is so often the case in class teams; never quitting, never giving up, always in the game, consequently the rivalry was just what it should be—not bitter, but intense to a marked degree.

Then it may be said that class athletics at the University have been instrumental in developing material that some day may be able to compete for Varsity laurels with the nervous edge of greenness worn off and put them in action on the field with some rudimentary knowledge of the game: it has created that degree of respect that one class should display for another, and that admiration that the victor always has for the vanquished, and vice versa; it has instilled a spirit of love in every man for his class; and last but not least, it has created friendships between coach and teams, between rivals and between team mates that may only be severed by the grim reaper—this game where eleven strong men huddle together for a common cause.

LOVE

Soft, and low, and sweet, and sad—

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was organized at the University of North Carolina on Oct. 1st, 1883. The aims of the Society, as expressed in the report of its first president, Dr. F. P. Venable, were "the arousing of an increased interest in scientific work, the building up of a spirit of research, the encouraging of those already at work and the advancing of our knowledge of the State and its resources." Since the organization of the Society, nearly twenty-five years ago, this aim has been consistently followed, and the history of the Society has been one of uninterrupted usefulness.

Geological Seminary

THE Geological Seminary was organized October 25th, 1892, for the presentation of original papers and the discussion of current geological literature. At the first meeting Prof. Collier Cobb gave some account of Geographic Methods of Geologic Investigation; Chas. Baskerville, '92, reviewed Davis's Rivers and Valleys of Pennsylvania; R. H. Mitchell, Vanderbilt '92, reviewed the work of W. J. McGee on Coastal-plain Geology. At the second meeting, held November 22nd, 1892, the geological and geographical journals were reviewed by DeBerniere Whitaker and A. H. McFayden, '93, and W. R. Kenan, Jr., and C. H. White, '94. A somewhat similar programme has been followed from October to April of each year, and the club has never missed a meeting since its organization. Its meetings have been held fortnightly since 1901.

The following students have taken part in the programme this session: R. T. Allen, R. B. Hardison, Hubert Hill, and L. G. Southard, Graduate Students; E. W. S. Cobb, Jerry Day, S. The little hand I held in mine

One long gone summer night?

The mocking-bird sang in the grove;

Sweet music, soft and low,

Was throbbing through the halls beneath

That evening long ago.

My hopes were faint, and yet I plunged,

My heart ceased beating: then

A grating voice broke on my ear,

"I'm in, and raise you ten!"

Ah, little hand I held in mine—

But two small pairs, oh God!—

I would that ere I bet you so

I'd lain beneath the sod!

MECKLENBURG COUNTY CLUB

Guilford County Club

The Guilford County Club was organized at the University in the fall of 1904. The purpose of the organization was to assist the boys from Guilford County to know and help each other, and in order that they might better study the development of the county in its various lines of activity. The Club meets the first Friday night in each month and is frequently addressed by Dr. C. Alphonse Smith and Dr. C. L. Raper and other prominent men from the county. Papers on some phase of activity peculiar to their home section are also read by the members. The Club, since its organization, has each year become more useful to students from Guilford County. When organized there were 17 members; since then it has grown until there are now 27 members.

TOAST

To you, fair maid of summer days,
To you I raise this brimming glass;
I drink to you, yet well I know
Your image, in the months that pass,
Will fade but to an afterglow

Of smiling eyes
And moonlit skies
Of other years.

We've reached the parting of the ways,
The wine is gone,
The sparkle flown--
Where are the tears?

The Faculty on The Yackety Yack

(Meeting called by Captain Frank immediately after appearance of the new annual. Minutes as perpetrated by Secretary Muncher).

Discussion whined open by Billy Major. "The Yackety Yack is an annual insult to the Faculty—and vice-versa." Billy Duls on rear seat, as usual when Major speaks, "Good."

"It's a good advertising medium," bubbled Collier, "and everything I say is worth repeating, even if it is called by some a monumental lie. This last copy reminds me——."

Frenchy, butting in as usual, and saying as little, "The Romantic Element is lacking and the Dramatic Unities are not observed. The climax is reached in——."

"How's that, please?" Charley Lee was only ten minutes late and wanted to make up for lost time. "To give a concrete example, would you say, Professor Bruner, that undue importance is given to drags?"

Bully wakes up, licks his lips reminiscently. He pulls down his cuff, consults his notes, frowns, and draws out his cutting sarcasm, "Not when they are so well directed as some."

"Ah, well, it's all nothing but a conception of the imagination, lacking in all semblance of reality. Metaphysics teaches us that nothing is real," gurgled Horace, trying hard to bluff his fine sensibilities into his usual lack of sense.

Smithy rose, prepared to make his usual oration. "Gentlemen, the Yackety Yack is the very quintessence of converging tommyrot. The Editors are irresponsible to their fingertips. They omitted our pictures, our personal statistics. I have written four new books I wished to include, and have been elected a member of two more societies. It is a veritable shame——."

"Ah, dry up, C. Alphonso," grated Noble Billy, "What if you have? Collier would still have you beaten. Collier has more than Jim Gray and Bill Fountain together. Smith, I believe it's sour grapes for yours. Only fools and great men get dragged in the Yackety Yack, you know. And, Horace, how did that cow tail look to Si? And I'm not talking about Si Hodge, either!"

"Gentlemen, gentlemen, there is nothing personal in this, of course," interpolated the secretary.

Josh starts to say something, but his tongue does not remember which end to begin with and he nearly chokes trying to work both ends at once. When he does get started he says nothing—as usual.

Dr. Alex breaks in, after blowing the air full of smoke rings, "I want it understood that I am no shade, even tho my pants—."

Oscar Ripley Rand is unable to suppress a snort. Dr. Alex turns—and just then Captain Frank swats the table with his flipper and disturbs the peaceful slumbers of George Howe. George wakes up, yawns as voluminously as possible—and that's saying a lot—and wants to know the cause of all this unwanted outburst.

Dr. Ven gives as the cause of his unusual agitation the unparalleled discovery of several truths in the discussed volume, called Yackety Yack. His voice grows husky with emotion, dies away in a fit of coughing, and he can speak no longer. At a sign from the Master, Secretary Muncher humbly approaches, confers with the now almost speechless President, and mouths out the following undeniable truths:

"James Alexander Gray, Junior, has kindly consented to accept the managership of the University."

"Buck Davis has resigned as Dean of the Coaching Department and Licentiate in Psychology, and applied for position as understudy to Dr. Coker. He guarantees his looks to fit not only himself, but also to give a fit to anybody else."

"Koon Royster, the only Peachalorum, Lalapatoopa, Nifty Proposition now extant, requests that it be announced in full Faculty Meeting that he is Licentious in Theological Engineering."

This was too much for the already overstrained Faculty, and they fled, George Howe giving one last lingering yawn.

Dr. Raper on Economics 4: "Mr. Wyatt, was it a good thing for the banks to resort to clearing house certificates?"

Wyatt: "What beautiful fairies revel in slumberland."

Prof. Williams: "Mr. Hester, what do you think about this?"

John Hester, waking up: "I wasn't thinking about this."

Prof. Williams: "What were you thinking about, then?"

John Hester: "To tell you the truth, I was thinking about how to keep awake."

Prof. Williams: "O, well, that illustrates my point."

Freshman: "I'll take five cents worth of candy, please."

A. A. Kluttz: "Take it all now?"

Raper: "Mr. Vogler, do things usually se'l at a profit or at a loss?"

Vogler: "I think so, sir; yes, sir."

Dr. Raper on Economics 1: "Now let us turn to another aspect of the question—

"But to take a concrete case, Mr. Vogler—"

"In other words you would say, Mr. Hodge—"

"There are quite a few—"

"That raises the question—"

"Will you tell us further about this, Mr. Kirkpatrick—"

"What would you say about that, Mr. Rose?"

"I wish to make this point before taking up that—"

"Is that your view, Mr. Osborne?"

"Why not?"

"Beg your pardon."

"Mr. McLean, what do you think of our Legislature?"

"How's that, please?"

"And that's why the banks were driven to the walls."

"We Need Five Good Men"

The man who has as his possession an unswerving devotion to success in business founded upon character, has the best asset on earth upon which to begin business. A young man starting with such an asset, is more certain of success than he who starts with a bank account or much property. We have associated with us, and in our employ, a number of young men of this stamp. They have started with us upon a business career of permanent and substantial success. Their future is established. They can make it what they will. Such men are hard to find. We want five more of them now.

Always the Leader

Since beginning business the GREENSBORO LIFE has ever been the acknowledged leader of all Life Insurance Companies operating in its territory. The GREENSBORO LIFE not only leads in volume of business, but also in liberality and attractiveness of policy contracts. During its first four weeks in business (24 working days) the GREENSBORO LIFE wrote over $500,000.00 of business. At the end of its first twelve months the business in force amounted to $4,557,258.00. When two and one-half years old, the business in force had reached $8,400,000 while the assets had grown from $125,000.00 to $323,679.76.

The Safest Investment on Earth

IT is a well-known fact that the average person does not find it easy to save money. The thrifty man finds it easier to save by adopting some systematic method which practically compels accumulation. Life Insurance is the easiest, safest and most satisfactory system the world has yet seen for accumulating something against the "rainy day" that comes to the majority of people sooner or later in life. To be sure, there are investments that pay higher rates of interest, but when the protection afforded and the absolute security are taken into consideration, there is no form of investment superior to Life Insurance.

As Life Insurance is superior to other forms of investment, so are the INCOME INDEMNITY and GUARANTEED ACCUMULATION policies superior to the contracts of other companies. These policies, in the event of the permanent disability or incapacity of the insured, become fully paid-up for life, the insured either taking a paid-up policy or collecting the full amount of his insurance, while living, in ten equal instalments. They have the highest loan and cash values and guarantee the highest dividends. Built on the "Square deal" principle. There are imitations, but the genuine is sold only by the

The Field It Covers

The complete straight-line key-board, removable platen, perfect alignment, delicate adjustment and wonderful durability of the

Smith Premier Typewriter

are advantages so apparent and so vital to good work that they have carried the Smith Premier into every business center throughout the world. This world-wide appreciation of The Smith Premier should at least prompt you to investigate its features before you buy. We send full information on request.

THE NEW VISIBLE

FOX TYPEWRITER

A Record Never Equalled

Perfect Visible Writing and the Durability of the Basket Type Machine

Whether you are interested in the mechanical features of a typewriter or not, if you are buying typewriters you are most vitally concerned in two things:

First, your typewriter should write in sight. Its reasonable that if you can see what you are doing, you can do more than when your work is hidden from view.

Second, your typewriter should be durable, so you will receive proper value for your money.

Previous to the advent of The Fox Visible it was impossible to build a Visible Typewriter with the wearing qualities of the old style machine.

Here is the Reason

The "basket type" machines, such as the old style Fox, the Remington and the Smith-Premier, have had an "assembling surface" of eighteen inches in which to assemble their type bar hangers. This allowed the use of a wide hanger and accounts for the recognized durability of such machines. In building other visible typewriters than the Fox Visible this "assembling surface" HAD TO BE SACRIFICED and instead of eighteen inches such machines have four and one-half inches and a type bar hanger $\frac{3.6}{1000}$ of an inch wide.

On the Fox Visible the Assembling Surface is 16½ inches, and the Type Bar Hanger 7-16 of an inch wide. This admits of adjustment and means durability.

With a narrow type bar it is a mechanical impossibility to secure permanent alignment and durability.

In Addition Notice These Features

Interchangeable Carriage, carriages of different lengths used on the same machine.

Tabulator, with every machine.

Two Color Ribbon.

Speed Escapement, and a dozen others that show the superiority of the machine.

Just ordinary business economy demands you investigate the Fox Visible before you buy. We make it easy for you.
